Group Health Denounced As Scheme to Ruin A.M.A.

Its Medical-Economic Theories Endanger Profession's Ideals, Defense Charges

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Coolly dissecting the Group Health Association and flinging the remains at prosecution counsel, William E. Leahy yesterday depicted the Federal employes' medical cooperative as a scheming commercial enterprise which aimed to destroy organized medicine.

The Washington attorney's day in court was one such as law students dream of and their professors set up as models. For 2¾ hours, interrupted only by a five-minute recess, Leahy stood before the jury and worked on G. H. A.

The 20 doctors whom he is defending against the Government's charges of monopolistic practices might have called Leahy's opening statement to the jury an exploratory operation, a self-explaining type of surgery.

His scalpel a strong, unhesitating voice that never faltered during the lengthy speech, Leahy's incisive thrusts laid bare—according to his interpretation to the jury—a corporate body conceived with questionable motives, organized by "haughty and arrogant" men and dedicated to destruction of the hallowed traditions of the medical profession.

Hurls Charge Back at G. H. A.

In his opening statement for the Government, concluded yesterday forenoon, John Henry Lewin charged the American Medical Association with attempting to crush Group Health Association. Leahy, to the contrary, accused the health cooperative of seeking to destroy the A. M. A. and its principles so that opposition to its medical-economic theories might be liquidated.

Speaking extemporaneously and without notes, eschewing a speaker's stand on which he might have leaned to rest his short, stocky frame, the defense lawyer systematically outlined, step by step, the alleged frailities of G. H. A. which constitute the framework of the doctors' case of having been impelled in the public interest to challenge the cooperative.

He described Group Health Association, which was launched here in 1937 to furnish medical care on a prepayment basis, as "one of the most carefully conceived schemes ever put in operation," whose objective was to foist a socio-economic experiment upon the District.

He denied the assertion by Lewin that organizers of the association sought out officials of the District Medical Society for advice and assistance.

He described Dr. Raymond E. Selders, a former medical director of G.H.A. as a doctor to whom local hospitals denied operating privileges because "the ink wasn't dry on his

Roosevelt Gives Good-Luck Hat For Movie Benefit

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—President Roosevelt has given away the battered gray fedora which he wore—for good luck—during his three Presidential campaigns.

Movie Actor Jean Hersholt got it—to raffle off for the benefit of the motion picture relief fund in Los Angeles next month.

When the President offered it to Hersholt during the recent third inaugural ceremonies, the actor said Mrs. Roosevelt was quite surprised.

"He is very superstitious about that hat," Hersholt said she told him. "I never thought he would part with it."

Tragedy Haunts the Skies

8 Die in Flying Fortress Crash, 12 in Airliner, 1 in Collision

Bomber, Carrying Secret Devices, Hits Nevada Mountain; Inquiry Started

Three airplane crashes took 21 Army and civilian lives yesterday, one of the most fatal days in the history of North American aviation.

A four-motored Army "flying fortress" bomber crashed and burned on Rugged Top Mountain, near Lovelock, Nev., killing all eight members of the crew.

A Trans-Canada Airlines plane plunged into wild, snow-covered bushland near Winnipeg, during a forced landing, killing nine passengers and three crew members.

Two Army pursuit planes collided and crashed over Long Island, killing one pilot.

By the United Press

Lovelock, Nev., Feb. 6.—An Army flying fortress, loaded with secret equipment for tests in the Alaskan Arctic outpost opposite Asia and commanded by a flight expert personally decorated by the President, carried its crew of eight to death against a mountain today.

It was confirmed that the four-engined bomber carried the heavily guarded new United States bombsight "and other secret equipment." The ship left the huge Army repair depot at Sacramento, Calif., where it had been under constant guard since arriving from Alaska and where there were unconfirmed reports of "sabotage" that coincided with the plunge of the fortress into ragged top mountain 70 minutes after its takeoff.

Why the flying giant, en route to Denver on a nonstop test flight at 19,000 feet, dived out of an overcast sky and into the 1,000-foot peak jutting out of a plateau 20 miles west of here, went unexplained. CCC enrollees under Army command did not allow even undertakers to visit the scene as a Board of Inquiry probed the third Western military air disaster since January 4.

The wreckage, with its charred and mangled bodies, was found by a CCC crew a few minutes after the big ship was believed to have crashed.

Foreman Floyd Carpenter reported back to his headquarters by radio that six bodies had been found crumpled inside the still burning wreckage and the two others some distance away. None of the bodies was recognizable, Carpenter said.

D. C. Response Greatest, Say Mission Aides

Leaders Jubilant After Comparison With 15 Other Cities

Throngs of Washington citizens yesterday warmed to the message of the National Christian Mission that "Christianity has the answer," while leaders reported the city's response in some lines to be greater than in any of the other 15 cities already visited.

Dr. Jesse M. Bader, of New York, national director of the Mission, enthusiastically announced, "The attendance at the six area mass meetings each night is larger here than anywhere else so far, although we've been to such large cities as Chicago and Pittsburgh."

The early morning breakfast conferences for local committee workers and speakers have drawn a larger group here than elsewhere, he said.

A beaming, athletic-looking minister stood before 700 high school students yesterday and demonstrated to them that religion has gusto.

Dr. Theodore F. Adams, Richmond Baptist pastor and a leader in the Misson, challenged the assembly at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School with the thought that "you're needed in the making of a better school and a better world."

"The church is not going to do its job in this next generation without you," Dr. Adams said at this program, typical of youth meetings in several Washington high schools yesterday in connection with the Mission.

The Anacostia pupils laughed and applauded when Dr. Adams recounted amusing incidents—but mostly they listened intently, so intently that afterwards J. P. Collins, principal, said: "In my 20 years in the public school system I don't think I've ever seen a group of pupils give such rapt attention to a speaker."

Drawing incidents from football and basketball games, he spoke of the need for purpose and self-control. He gave the group three directions which a teacher gave him years ago: "Go; keep going; help someone else to go."

"When you come into a crowd, does the level of conversation and

Vichy to Use Fleet Threat In Dickering

Power to Send Navy To Africa Seen as Weapon for Darlan

By Ralph E. Heinzen,
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Feb. 6.—Armed with a threat to send the formidable fleet to Africa beyond Germany's reach, Admiral Darlan arrived in Paris tonight to seek to compromise on Nazi-supported demands which would install Pierre Laval as virtual dictator of France.

The French navy minister and chief confidant of Marshal Petain reached Paris shortly before 7 p. m. bearing an offer from the marshal which would make Darlan premier and restore Laval to his former post of vice premier.

Under the proposed compromise Petain would surrender to Darlan his direct control of the government, remaining only as titular chief of state, and Laval would be brought back into the Vichy regime in a secondary role.

There was belief in many quarters that Laval, a shrewd bargainer, would reject the proposal and that in the end he might succeed in obtaining the post of foreign minister which Petain would give to Darlan.

The threat of the fleet quitting Toulon and going to Africa is perhaps Darlan's best argument in his Paris talks.

He has made it clear in recent days as the French-German crisis neared its climax, that he will never voluntarily surrender a single warship or a single naval base such as Bizerte to any demand or challenge, whether it may come from the Axis or from Britain.

(The new Nazi-approved French Party of National Popular Concentration in Paris warned in an official statement that Adolf Hitler may establish a Gauleiter rule over France, leaving the unoccupied zone "to dangle like dead flesh," unless Petain's regime quickly accepts Laval as its leader.

(Germany, it was said in possible reference to the North African bases, must obtain French collaboration and "a utilization of Africa through European cooperation.")

Darlan will meet, for the second time this week, with Laval tomorrow morning and submit to him Petain's compromise proposals.

Life-Saving Benefits

2 More Legion Parties Planned To Raise Funds for Blood Bank

Two more American Legion benefits were announced yesterday and at the same time arrangements were completed for a special event sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce and Station WOL, broadening public participation in the Children's Hospital blood bank campaign.

Arthur L. Thomas, commander of Second Division Post, and Mrs. Robert C. Snow, president of its auxiliary, reported that a benefit party has been scheduled for March 8 at the latter's residence, 1912 Shepherd Street Northeast.

A similar program whose proceeds will go into the blood and serum bank fund was announced by Sergt. Jasper Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 13, Ayden A. Dibble, post commander, and Mrs. Daniel M. Goodacre, president of the women's group, said the party would be held at 1407 Webster Street Northwest on a date to be announced later.

The Willard Hotel is the place and 8 p. m. next Friday—St. Valentine's Day—is the time for a novel broadcast sponsored by the Junior Board and WOL. Earle Hough, chairman of the arrangements committee, said.

Offering an hour of entertainment by stage and radio personalities, the program will be "sold" to the studio audience at 50 cents per person, the proceeds going to Children's Hospital. The Willard Room, in which it will be held, will have seats for 500.

The first 30 minutes of the unique show will be broadcast by WOL.

Pursuit in the Desert

By W. P. Saphire
International News Service Staff Writer

Cairo, Feb. 6.—Motorized British detachments, speeding across Libya by three routes, tonight were engaged in a race to reach the Cyrenaican seaport capital of Bengasi before the Italian command can halt the retreat of its troops and organize resistance.

While all eastern Libya came under the immediate threat of capture, air-supported British legions smashed deeper into the other Italian African domains—Eritrea, Somaliland and Abyssinia.

In Eritrea, one British armored column was laying heavy siege to the Fascist defenses of the railway town of Cheren, 50 miles west of the colonial capital of Asmara; and a second column was pressing withdrawing Italians east of captured Barentu back upon the road center of Tole.

At least 1,500 prisoners were seized by the British in their sweep across Eritrea toward the Red Sea, a Cairo communique disclosed.

Advance in Abyssinia Speeded

In southern Somaliland, hard-hitting South African troops occupied the fortified Fascist post of Beles Gugani, 45 miles east of the British Kenya border, after overpowering an Italian garrison consisting of two army companies.

Northwestern Abyssinia also witnessed an accelerated advance by British troops on the road to strategic Gondar, terminus of the highway that leads down to the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa.

Advancing between 20 and 30 miles a day, the three British columns pushing west across Libya were expected to reach the fringes of Bengasi Saturday or Sunday.

Official sources in Cairo said they were unaware of reports that Italian troops already were beginning to leave Bengasi to flee into Tripolitania (western Libya). The great Libyan naval seaport has a population of about 35,000.

One British force, moving along the coastal road, and a second column pressing along an inland road to the south were reported nearing Barce, 60 miles north and east of Bengasi. Barce is the site of a large Italian airdrome and the head of a railway leading to Bengasi.

Tobey Demands Investigation Of U. S. Cafe Setup

A demand that the Senate Rules Committee investigate the Welfare and Recreational Association, which feeds most Government employes in Washington, brought a retort from Samuel Goodacre, president, last night that he would be "happy to have the Senate investigate our activities."

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who already has tackled the Hague political machine and an alleged radio monopoly charged the association with "loose handling of funds" and a "flippant disregard of law."

Basing his attack on the year-old report of the General Accounting Office, Senator Tobey told the Senate that the nonprofit-making organization of Federal workers owes the Treasury $261,000 under terms of a contract to share the profits from its manifold operations.

House Votes Right to Revoke Lease Bill at Will; Lindbergh Insists Britain Cannot Win

Flier Fears Aid Plan Will Lead to War On Losing Side; Calls U. S. Air Force Weak

(Partial Text of Lindbergh's Statement, Page 19.)

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, star witness against the Administration's aid-to-Britain bill, asserted yesterday that the American air force is in a "deplorable condition," and by relative standards, "probably weaker than when the war started."

Coolly attacking the bill in 4½ hours of testimony, the Nation's most famous aviator advised the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that present policies will lead to American entrance into a war that cannot be won.

"I'm against appeasement," he said, "but I'm more strongly against an unsuccessful war."

Without hesitation, Col. Lindbergh reiterated the charge he made exactly two weeks previously at the House hearing—that the "encouragement" given England and France by the United States "had a great deal to do" with the outbreak of the war.

Furthermore, he said, the United States has "encouraged the war to continue," and American aid to Britain will prolong the conflict without materially affecting the outcome. Repeatedly, Col. Lindbergh emphasized his belief that the British cannot win.

On that basis, he urged that the official American attitude be "receptive" to a "negotiated peace"—"and not encourage England" to a hopeless struggle.

"I agree that a peace could not be negotiated now that would be considered just by our standards in America," Col. Lindbergh said, "but the English would be better off rather than continue the war. I took the same stand in respect to France—and I think I've been borne out."

Asked what the United States could do to promote such a peace, the witness indicated that he did not expect this country to take positive action other than indicate a "receptive" attitude. He also advocated holding British aid down to the minimum of present commitments.

Cites War Encouragement

Closely questioned on his belief that the United States had promoted the war, Col. Lindbergh said that there had been "at least indirect encouragement by Government officials and the attitude of American newspapers." He admitted that he had no proof that American diplomats had egged on Britain and France; but insisted that on his trips to Europe he had encountered the "feeling that we would eventually come in" and, without that, "they probably would not have declared war at the time they did."

"After all, the French and Eng-

Tradition Snubbed; Six Cruisers Named For Islands, Alaska

The Navy yesterday departed from its long-time custom of naming its cruisers for American cities and dubbed a group of the new warships after Territories and possessions.

Five cruisers to be built by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation were named the Alaska, Guam, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Samoa. A sixth was designed The Philippines. Officials would not concede that this action had any bearing in the discussion over changing the law freeing the Philippine Islands in 1946.

G. M. Reports Net Of $195,500,000

New York, Feb. 6 (INS).—General Motors Corporation today reported preliminary net earnings for 1940 of $195,500,000, equal to $4.32 a common share, compared with $183,290,-22 or $4.04 a comman share in 1939.

It was reported that 1940 earnings before deducting income and excess-profits taxes were $92,500,-000 above comparable earnings in 1939, but increased provision for normal income taxes and provision for excess-profits tax absorbed $80,-300,000 of these increased earnings.

No. 1 U. S. Ambassador

Winant, Lifelong Republican, Named Envoy to London

(See Editorial, "Diplomatic Reshuffle," Page 8.)

By George Bookman,
Post Staff Writer

John Gilbert Winant, a lifelong Republican who is highly regarded by all factions of labor, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to be Ambassador to Great Britain, this nation's most responsible diplomatic post.

The name of the three-time Republican Governor of New Hampshire and former Social Security Board chairman was sent to the Senate along with nine other diplomatic nominations in a long-awaited realignment of this country's representation abroad.

Mr. Roosevelt's choice of Winant, who has served the New Deal in many capacities and since 1939 has been director of the International Labor Office, was regarded as a bid for the support of British and American labor.

To balance the Winant appointment, the President was expected to appoint shortly a businessman as Minister to Great Britain. The London Government, in sending Lord Halifax as Ambassador to the United States, also appointed two Ministers to assist him.

W. Averill Harriman, railroad executive now serving on the Defense Commission, and S. Clay Williams, tobacco manufacturer, have been mentioned for the post of Minister.

Winant, whose nomination must now be confirmed by the Senate, would succeed Joseph P. Kennedy, who resigned.

At the same time that he chose Winant for the Court of St. James's President Roosevelt gave high recognition to the refugee governments of Hitler - conquered countries by naming Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., now Ambassador to Poland, to serve without additional pay as Ambassador to Belgium and Minister to Norway and the Netherlands. All four governments are located in London at present.

In another important shift, the President transferred veteran Nelson

1,100 More Selects to Get February Call

1,500 to Be Examined; Speedup Reveals Housing Progress

Selective Service officials, in announcements signalizing the approach of the peak of the draft, reported a February quota call for 1,100 District men yesterday simultaneously with the opening of a second Third Corps Area reception center at Camp Lee, near Hopewell, Va.

The 1,100 new Washington selects, more than triple the number which will go into uniform in the February swearing-in, will be inducted March 3 to 10, inclusive, at Baltimore.

All 1,100 will be assigned to duty at Fort Bliss, Texas, where they will join units made up of their fellow townsmen of the 260th Coast Artillery, antiaircraft regiment of the District National Guard

Goes Into High Gear

With the large induction, the opening of the new reception center, where the recruits go through preliminary processing en route to permanent assignments, indicates the draft machinery—long delayed because of housing difficulties—is now about to go into high gear.

A still larger induction may be in store for the District in April, but numbers of selects sworn-in in succeeding months should remain approximately the same, it was understood.

Meanwhile, The Post learned last night that preparations at Camp Lee, unlike those at Fort Meade, Md., where inadequate housing held down early induction quotas, are ten days ahead of schedule.

O.P.M. to Give Nelson Final Say on Buying

Directive Order Favors Civilians Over Military Agents

By Alfred Friendly.

A "directive" order from the Office of Production Management, expected to be handed down within a few days, will definitely allocate to the OPM purchases division final authority over all military buying, it was learned last night.

The order will constitute a victory for Donald M. Nelson, OPM director of purchases, whose interpretation of his duties was challenged not only by the Army and Navy but by executives in the OPM production division.

The OPM "directive" will be a clarification and explanation of the functions delegated to the purchases division in the President's executive order creating the organization. Although the division will still function primarily in an advisory capacity, and will not do any buying itself, the order will make clear that the decision on conflicting problems rests with Nelson's group, it was reported.

Nelson's draft of a general memorandum, outlining what he conceived to be his functions, was submitted to other divisions of the OPM some days ago. It was returned with what were reported to be major modifications inserted by Frederick M. Eaton, production division legal head. Nelson is said to have carried his disagreement to the President, who resolved the problem in Nelson's favor.

The decision is seen in some quarters as establishing, as a matter of Government policy, that military purchasing in an "all out" defense program is primarily a civilian function.

Live Snakes in Court Rattled Jury, Slayer Claims in Appeal

By the Associated Press

The propriety of exhibiting two live rattlesnakes to a jury in a Los Angeles trial was defended yesterday before the Supreme Court on the ground that they were "one of the agencies employed in a fiendish plan to commit murder for profit."

Everett W. Mattoon, assistant attorney general of California, made this assertion in urging the tribunal to sustain a death sentence given Robert S. James, Los Angeles barber convicted of murdering his wife in 1935.

The State alleged that James and a codefendent drowned Mrs. James in a bathtub as part of a plan to collect insurance, after failing to produce her death by thrusting her foot into a box containing two rattlesnakes.

Morris Lavine, counsel for James, asserted that the "live, writhing, hissing rattlesnakes" were displayed in Los Angeles County Superior Court in an attempt to "influence the jurors and excite their passion."

"The snakes," he said, "were nicknamed 'Lightning' and 'Lethal.' They were lightning in their effect on the jury and lethal in their effect on the defendant."

Eugene D. Williams, another attorney for the State, objected to describing the snakes as "writhing" and "hissing." He said this was one of a "complete series of misstatements" by defense counsel.

"Rattlesnakes don't writhe and hiss," he shouted. "That is not their method of expressing affection or displeasure. Rattlesnakes coil and rattle."

Democrats Caught Napping, 148 to 141, But They Cheer Up as Change Wins Votes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday unexpectedly overrode its leadership, 148 to 141, to reserve for Congress the right to terminate at will President Roosevelt's proposed powers to lend or lease arms.

The supposed Administration defeat was immediately capitalized by the Democratic forces as an answer to charges of "dictatorship."

Caught napping by the amendment, leaders first studied means to remove it from the bill.

But that effort was abandoned last night when it became apparent that the change was winning G. O. P. votes for the aid-England bill.

"I wish I had thought of it myself," said one Administration spokesman.

Offered By Dirksen

The surprise amendment, which provides that Congress by concurrent resolution can recall the President's lend-lease powers without White House signature, was offered by a Republican—Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois. When the vote was put some 50 Democrats, who might have defeated the move, were downstairs eating lunch.

It was the only variation from the Administration schedule in a seven-hour stretch on the bill and amendments. Half-way through the six-page measure moved the House, leaving leaders in a position to drive it to passage late tonight.

All other first-day opposition amendments were beaten down. They were:

Complete substitute for the bill by Representative Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota, placing arms aid on a $2,000,000,000 money loan basis. It was defeated 206 to 145.

Substitute Bill Ordered Out

Substitute bill by Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, providing for acquisition of British Western Hemisphere possessions for a negotiated sum, minus war debts. Killed on a point of order.

Amendments by Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, providing that Army and Navy chiefs must certify that arms lent from the Nation's defense ppol are "not essential to the defense of the United States. Defeated 109 to 78.

Stimson Denies Temporary Badge Is Hint He'll Quit

Secretary of War Stimson, who has been regularly denying that he planned to resign, was asked another personal question at his press conference yesterday.

"Where's your badge?" a reporter inquired, referring to the identification all War employes must wear.

Stimson hesitated, and then pulled back his coat. Everyone laughed, for it read "temporary"—one of those issued to nonpermanent employes or pending issuance of a regular badge with photograph.

"That's why I pinned it inside," he explained, joining in the laugh. "The answer is still no, however."

piration of the present Congress in 1942. Defeated 136 to 93.

Amendment by Representative Mundt making it "the sense of this Congress "that American ships should not be sent into belligerent ports or belligerent waters. Defeated 111 to 74.

At any early morning session, Foreign Affairs Committee Democrats in a compromise had agreed on two more minor changes in the measure, bringing to six the total Administration "concessions."

These two proposals would limit to three years after July 1, 1943, the President's power to carry out arms loan contracts, and emphasize that nothing in the bill authorizes entry of American vessels into combat areas.

Chairman Bloom announced the committee's action as the House convened. Shortly afterward, Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, offered the first of the Administration's admendments.

It was a simple provision that only after consultation with his Army and Navy chiefs could President Roosevelt lend, lease or give defense articles to Britain. This was approved by a voice vote despite Republican efforts to tighten it.

Teller Count Changes Vote

Next committee amendment limited the life of the law to June 30, 1943, and the President's powers under contract to three years longer. The House adopted the committee change, viva voce, only to hear Dirksen propose this added language:

"Nor shall such powers be exercised if terminated by a concurrent resolution of both Houses of Congress."

The Dirksen amendment had never been advanced in committee and leaders felt assured of its defeat. The first standing vote bore them out, rejecting the amendment 107 to 83. But Dirksen demanded a teller count, and this time he won, 148 to 141.

The amendment caught the leadership in a parliamentary predicament. Normally they could overcome Dirksen's seven-vote margin on a final roll call vote. But his provision now was a part of the committee amendment, and to defeat it they must also kill the Administration's limitation on the life of the law.

While another parliamentary out was being studied—a complete Administration substitute for the bill—it became apparent that the amendment was gaining votes for the bill. Tentatively leaders decided to retain it as a weapon against Republican thrusts at Presidential powers.

How the Device Works

The "concurrent resolution," Dirksen's device for check-reigning the President's powers, requires merely a majority vote by both Houses of Congress, without any Presidential signature.

Without the provision, Congress could terminate the Presidential powers only by joint resolution, which requires the President's signature. The President could veto a joint resolution, and only by a two-thirds vote could Congress override it.

Republicans have directed their chief attack on the power grant to the President, Representative Fish, of New York, charging that they meant "complete abdication by Congress."

The Dirksen amendment will be used to answer that argument.

Hopes Controversy Will End

"The bill now is in shape to pass in 30 minutes," Representative Pace (Democrat), of Georgia, told the House. "My hope is that now all the rights and powers of Congress are in the hands of a simple majority of Congress this eternal controversy will end."

Throughout the long afternoon's voting on amendments, both Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack worked closely on the floor with Chairman Bloom and Representative Johnson, his ranking committeeman. Minority Leader Martin sat at the minority committee table with Fish to direct the opposition.

Today's first vote will come on adoption of section 3, power "heart of the bill." Other tests faced by the Administration before the final vote on the bill include opposition efforts to place a top limit on arms aid, to deny the President power to give away naval units, and to restrict the amount of other existing defense equipment the President can lend.

Fish and the minority opposition have agreed to final action on the bill tonight, but leaders said the large number of amendments awaiting action conceivably may postpone the final vote until tomorrow.

Greek Banknotes Scattered by Bomb

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Athens, Feb. 6.—During their last raid on Salonika, Italian aviators strewed the streets with paper notes that obtained plenty of attention. They were thousand-drachma notes, worth $680 apiece.

According to the Greek newspaper "Assirmatos," an explosive bomb fell on the house of one of the city's wealthier citizens and smashed his safe, scattering 280,000 drachmas into the streets. Some passersby began to pick up the notes, whereupon the police arrived and picked up the passersby.

U. S. Invasion Called 'Fantastic'

COL. ROBERT McCORMICK, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday that it was "fantastic" to believe the United States could be invaded. He said he didn't wish to express an opinion on the lend-lease bill, but favored occupation of British and French island possessions in this hemisphere to keep Germany from using them lish declared war on Germany," said Col. Lindbergh, adding that he believed the Germans originally intended to attack Russia rather than the West.

Asserting that "there is no danger whatever of an invasion if we keep our production here," he reasoned that "if we ever are invaded in America the responsibility will lie upon those who send our arms abroad."

Col. Lindbergh declared he was opposed to "purchasing time with English blood." He suggested that "if it's our war, we should fight it; if not, we shouldn't."

Tells of Nazi Medal

At the request of committee members, Col. Lindbergh told the story of how he received a decoration from Gen. Hermann Goering in 1938. He said he had been asked by the American Ambassador to attend a dinner for Goering to help promote better German-American relations. At the dinner, with no previous warning, said Col. Lindbergh, Goering "simply handed me the box" containing the medal.

Col. Lindbergh siad that at the time of the Munich settlement, he went to England at Ambassador Kennedy's request, and there informed British officials that "the German air force was stronger than any combination that could be brought against it."

Col. Robert McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, told the committee that "it is fantastic to suggest that we are in any danger of attack." He said he did not think a two-ocean Navy is a military necessity, and that if the United States is attacked in two oceans at the same time, "we could stand on our outposts in one ocean and fight in the other."

"I wish you could convince the Navy of that—it would save a lot of money," dryly observed Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

Col. McCormick said he had "no opinion" on the pending bill, and had no suggestion as to how to aid the British when their resources run out. "I'm willing to let her have supplies for defense but I don't think she needs any," commented the colonel.

Commons Hears Aid Bill Plea; War Costs $42,000,000 a Day

By Sidney J. Williams.
United Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 6.—A plea came from Parliament today for prompt passage of President Roosevelt's lend-lease bill as it was revealed that the war is costing Britain more than $42,000,000 a day and new appropriations totaling $6,400,000,000 were voted.

Pethwick Lawrence, former financial secretary of the treasury, told Commons that the United States cash-and-carry principle had been a drain on Britain's resources but that passage of the lend-lease bill would provide relief, "at any rate for a time"

"I am sure I am expressing in behalf of every member of the House and the whole country our deep sense of gratitude for the generosity the (lend-lease) proposal involves," Lawrence said. "We hope that the very generous attitude of the President will find expression in Congress by carrying that bill through."

Lawrence spoke after Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, had disclosed Britain's staggering war costs and had asked supplementary appropriations of £600,000,000 ($2,400,000,000) to meet expenses for the balance of the fiscal year ending March 31 and £1,000,000,000 ($4,000,000,000) to begin the 1941-42 fiscal year.

Commons approved the appropriations without a record vote.

The chancellor's figures showed that the government's expenditures were more than half the total national income.

Sir Kingsley minimized the danger of inflation, which he said the government was watching closely, but warned the British public, already bowed down under crushing taxes, of "still heavier burdens and sacrifices" in the future.

The British tax burden already is such as to make an American gasp. The normal income tax is 42½ per cent on income above exemptions, which are small. The excess profits tax is 100 per cent.

The "purchase tax" on many commodities, including clothing and household goods, is 33⅓ per cent; on other more essential items it is 16 2-3 per cent. Estate duties range up to 65 per cent. Tobacco and liquors are taxed almost 100 per cent.

The daily expenditure of $42,000,000 disclosed by the chancellor did not include ordinary government expenses, which add another $7,000,000 a day. Sir Kingsley said the present war was by far the most costly in British history.

The chancellor's warning that taxes would be increased in the next budget late in March recognized the growing criticism and demands by economists and financial circles for a sounder financing of the war. The demand of the people for sounder financing is running ahead of the government, the same as is a demand for greater production efficiency.

It is estimated that the deficit for the fiscal year ending March 31 will be £2,500,000,000 ($10,000,000,000) and that for the 1941-42 fiscal year, £3,400,000,000 ($13,600,000,000). Taxes and borrowing are falling far short of bridging this gap, which thus far has been controlled partially by the liquidation of dollar assets, proceeds from the sale of gold and increases in the floating debt.

Economists say that the gap must be bridged or the country will face inflation, although with price control, exchange control, limitation on production of nonessentials and the excess profits tax of 100 per cent it would not be runaway inflation such as hit Germany after the war of 1914-18.

Hanford MacNider, Assistant Secretary of War under President Coolidge and Minister to Canada under President Hoover. MacNider denounced the measure as "a war bill," and said that "propaganda about imminent invasion is . . . a vicious attempt to demoralize a great people into a breakdown of free government."

O. K. Armstrong, of Springfield, Mo., formerly an officer of the No Foreign War Campaign, urged that the bill be "overwhelmingly defeated."

Wheeler Attack On Air Force Called Unfair

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Secretary Stimson yesterday dismissed charges made by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of deficiencies in Army air power with a declaration the latter's statements were "unfair."

Joining the Administration's verbal war with the leading Capitol Hill antiinterventionist, Stimson said he had not checked figures cited by Wheeler as to planes on hand and deliveries in 1940, but added that they were "not correct enough for me to indorse them."

Wheeler, he said, had been "unfair" by implying that the deficiencies which exist are "somebody's fault and due to bad management." The Senator charged that the Army has no planes fit for combat in modern warfare, that only 635 warplanes are on hand and that none of them have leak-proof gas tanks, sufficient armament or armor-plate.

"If Senator Wheeler had been fair," Stimson stated, "he would have said while we might not have planes with leak-proof tanks, we have the materials ready to make our plane tanks leak-proof."

"You can rest assured," the War chief added, "that all planes going into combat, if we have to go into combat, will have such improvements."

The secretary declared that French and British financing of the expansion of American aircraft production facilities during the early days of the war will soon result in an enormous increase in the production of war planes for American armed forces.

The United States is just beginning to get the benefit of these French and British expenditures, he said. He pointed out that a great many additions to our airplane production facilities are just being completed, and that the United States was "going through a period of preparation," before production could be increased "enormously."

Stimson told reporters he considered that there had been "remarkably few strikes" in defense industries to date. "A great deal of the credit is due to Labor Commissioner Sidney Hillman," he said.

Commenting on the cantonment situation, Stimson said that construction was now behind schedule on only about half of the projects, as compared with two-thirds some time ago.

The appointment of a leading civil engineer and a prominent architect to important posts in the Army construction program was announced at the same time. Frederick H. Fowler, president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, will become chief of the civil engineering unit of the War Department construction division, and George E. Bergstrom, president of the American Institute of Architects, will head the architectural unit of the same office.

Dutch Ex-Premier Reported Deserting to Germans

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 6—A Royal Netherlands government broadcast tonight to the people of occupied Holland announced that former Premier Dirk Jan De Geer, who headed the cabinet when it was decided to transfer to London, had broken his pledged word and left Lisbon for his homeland, now in the grip of the Germans, instead of carrying out a mission on which he had been sent to the Netherlands East Indies.

In Dutch circles here it was said that the 78-year-old statesman, who relinquished the premiership last September because he thought its demands were greater than he could bear at his advanced age and in his feeble health, has been pining to see his family and has been worried over the health of his wife, who is still in Holland.

The broadcast asserted that De Geer's action would in no way be interpreted as "an indication of any change in the firm determination of the Royal Netherlands government to continue the war against Germany on the side of its British ally until ultimate victory."

Defense Board Asked to Waive Labor Policy for Canners

The National Defense Commission, confronted with the problem of obtaining $75,000,000 worth of canned food for the Army, has been asked to make an exemption in its unanimously adopted policy of labor protection, it was learned yesterday.

The first test of the commission's policy, promulgated August 31 last year, arose when its purchases division supported a request of Army buyers that canners of seasonal and perishable food be exempted from provisions of the Walsh-Healey Act.

The Army, which had previously made the request to the Labor Department labor contracts division, temporarily dropped the matter when L. Metcalfe Walling, Walsh-Healey Act administrator, declared that if overtime provisions were waived, all other requirements of the act, such as child labor, minimum wage and safety and sanitary conditions, would have to be dropped at the same time.

Walling dismissed the case without prejudice early this week. The Army, it was learned, immediately laid its problem at the door of the Defense Commission purchases division, which relayed it to the full commission on Wednesday.

No decision was made at the commission meeting on that day, it was reported, pending further discussion.

The commission's problem, it is believed, arises from the fact that its labor policy statement read, in part, "All work carried on as part of the defense program should comply with Federal statutory provisions affecting labor wherever such provisions are applicable. This applies to the Walsh-Healey Act . . ."

If the commission should support the Army in reopening the case before the Labor Contracts Division, it would be the first instance in which it has asked that its policy be waived. Certain circles in the commission fear that this could be taken as a precedent which might later undermine the entire policy.

Under the present arrangement, canners need not pay time-and-one-half overtime wages, inasmuch as they have a seasonal exemption from provisions of the Wage-Hour Act and, not dealing on direct Government contracts, are not subject to Walsh-Healey Act requirements.

This situation would be changed if the food packers became prime contractors of Army orders.

The Army has reported that canners will not bid on Government orders if Walsh-Healey provisions apply, since they will thus be placed at a competitive disadvantage with other packers not working on Government contracts.

Grumman Planes Not Offered Greece As Gift, Knox Says

The Navy's offer of 30 older Grumman fighting planes to Greece does not mean that the craft would be a free gift after all, it was explained last night.

Secretary Knox issued a statement "clarifying" his declaration of Wednesday that the planes had been offered free. He said the transaction contemplated the Navy "trading-in" the planes to the manufacturer for new craft and the latter then selling them to Greece.

Knox had reported that Greece had refused the offer, although representatives of that nation said negotiations were still in progress.

New Japanese Ambassador Arrives At San Francisco

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Feb. 6.—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, radiating confidence that the United States and Japan would remain at peace, arrived to the welcome of high military officials today en route to his new post as Japanese Ambassador at Washington.

Aboard the Kamakura Maru, escorted to the Golden Gate by two U. S. destroyers, the admiral returned a smiling "No" to all questions as to whether he believed war with Japan a probability and said in a prepared statement:

"There is no question whatsoever outstanding between the two countries which cannot be settled in an amicable and satisfactory manner through a timely display of statesmanship by the responsible people on both sides."

He was welcomed on shipboard by representatives of the Army, Navy and the city of San Francisco. Later at his hotel he received Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, commanding general of the Fourth Army, and Rear Admiral A. J. Hepburn, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District.

He returned the call on the two officers at their respective headquarters this afternoon, receiving a 19-gun salute at the Presidio.

The genial, 64-year-old admiral, until recently Japanese minister of foreign affairs, said he was "very glad to have come again to the United States—a country I have known since 1899 . . . I love the country and admire its people. The people of Japan want good relations with you. I go to Washington with great hope."

Aluminum Co. Buys Vital Defense Firm

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Feb. 6.—The Aluminum Co. of America announced today the purchase of full control of the American Magnesium Corporation. Already owner of half of the corporation, the Aluminum Co. bought the other half from the General Aniline and Film Corporation of New York.

"As requested by the Office of Production Management of the National Defense program," the announcement said, "Aluminum Co. of America will start immediately the further expansion of operations of American Magnesium Corporation so that manufacture of magnesium products by the latter corporation will be greatly increased."

Magnesium is used in aircraft production, and is particularly valuable for bomb casings, being one-third lighter than aluminum.

The Alumnium Co., General Aniline and the American Magnesium Corporation are three of five American companies indicted last week by a Federal grand jury on charges of conspiring with I. G. Farben Industrie, of Germany, to create a world-wide magnesium trust. The five American companies and seven of their officers, also indicted, pleaded not guilty today in United States District Court, but the German firm and two of its German officers, also indicted, made no appearance.

According to the indictment, General Aniline is German-controlled.

The other two American corporate defendants in the antitrust action are the Magnesium Development Corporation, one-half of which, according to the indictment, is owned by the German dye trust, and the Dow Chemical Co., of Midland, Mich., sole producer and distributor of magnesium metal in the United States.

In its announcement today the aluminum company said its expansion of the American Magnesium Corporation will "require millions of dollars."

The announcement said, "Although the plant facilities of the American Magnesium Corporation were more than adequate to meet peacetime demands, the national crisis makes it important to carry out the program."

Laddie, Just a Dog, Hunger-Strikes His Way Into Army

Chanute, Kans., Feb. 6 (AP).—The Army has a heart, so 10-year-old Laddie will join his master—at Camp Ord, Calif.

Laddie—just a dog—has been on an intermittent hunger strike since Everett Scott enlisted three months ago.

Friends, fearful the animal would die, appealed to Maj. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, Camp Ord commandant. He agreed to let Scott have his dog.

So today Laddie was put aboard a train for Kansas City, where he will go by airliner to the West Coast.

Attack After Attack in Vain, Italian Losses Are Staggering

By the Associated Press

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Feb. 6.—Greek warriors are pounding at the very gates of Tepeleni, vitally important Albanian town commanding the road leading to the Adriatic port of Valona, 28 miles away, border dispatches said tonight. The town is in flames.

The harassed Italians, trying desperately to stem the Greek advance, were reported to have made attack after attack here and nearer the coast, only to be thrown back with staggering losses. Even crack Fascist motorized units were used to no avail.

Gen. Ugo Cavallero has thrown everything he has into the battle of Tepeleni because he realizes the fate of the entire Fascist venture in Albania hinges on success or failure there, Greek sources say.

In the Devol Valley sector, in central Albania, the Greeks and Italians fought toe-to-toe with bayonets throughout the day, advices reaching here said, with considerable losses on both sides and without change in original positions.

Greeks here reported their forces in the last ten days had dislodged the Italians from more than 4 square miles of territory.

Counterattacks Beaten Off

Athens, Feb. 6 (AP).—Six tanks and armored cars of an Italian formation were destroyed and the commanding officer of the unit was killed, a Greek government spokesman reported today, when Greeks hurled back a counterattack on their lines in the Klisura sector of the Albanian front.

The spokesman said a subsequent attack on a smaller scale a few hours later likewise was repulsed by heavy machine-gun fire.

Prisoners, including the drivers and crews of the tanks and armored cars, were captured, he said.

Death Decreed For Rumanians Aiding Revolt

By Robert St. John
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Feb. 6.—Premier Antonescu today announced startling death penalty decrees aimed at the rebellious Iron Guard, as rumors spread that Horia Sima, leader of the bloody revolt of January 21-23, was plotting a new insurrection as a fugitive.

Antonescu apparently was convinced that any fresh outbreak would include another attempt at his assassination, for he was reported to have designated one of Rumania's outstanding army leaders to succeed him in event of his death. The name of the general was kept secret.

Thousands of soldiers, armed with submachine guns and escorted by tanks, hunted Sima.

Capital Combed for Sima

Every dwelling in the capital was searched from cellar to attic as authorities sought to run down the leader who at various times has been reported captured, executed, escaped to Russia and still in hiding.

Antonescu took cognizance of rumors that Sima still is at large by his series of decrees, which provided the most drastic criminal code in Rumanian history.

The death penalty was provided for persons hiding the revolt leader, helping him escape from the country or failing to inform authorities of a plot, and for any civilian found with arms or explosives.

It was likewise decreed for anyone engaging in demonstrations, firing on soldiers or public buildings, attempting to kill the King, fomenting army rebellion, wearing a uniform illegally, or permitting a sniper to fire from his windows.

Altogether 20 crimes were made punishable by death, including even writing antigovernment articles, drawing antigovernment cartoons, or singing political songs.

From one to five years imprisonment was provided for parents whose children are convicted of crimes. (In the Iron Guard revolt, one machine gun was manned by a 12-year-old boy.)

The decrees were directed with special rigor at Communists, Jews and persons of non-Rumanian origin. Prison terms were ordered doubled for them. The death penalty was threatened for persons promising redistribution of property or ending of taxation.

While declaring he did not wish to "spill blood," Antonescu said rebellions must be crushed and order maintained "for us and our allies."

Mine Workings Crash, Pa. Town Is Damaged

West Pittston, Pa., Feb. 6 (AP).—Mine workings beneath this anthracite community of 8,000 gave way today and sections of a three-block area settled with a roar, damaging buildings and opening cracks in streets and pavements.

Water and gas mains were broken. Telephone and electric wires were snapped. Although the subsidence generally was only a few inches, the earth dropped as much as 6 feet in some places.

Parading Students in Rome Shout 'Down With Democracy'

By the Associated Press

Rome, Feb. 6.—Several hundred students, shouting "Down with democracy" and crying "vivas" for Mussolini, Hitler and Italy's King, marched today from the tomb of the Italian Unknown Soldier through Rome's principal streets toward the American Embassy, but turned into a side street without passing the embassy itself.

Among the signs they carried was one bearing the inscription, "Stand by the Duce!"

Some reported that anti-American shouts were heard, but no actual hearers of such cries could be found, while the demonstrators themselves said they were protesting against Britain and not America.

The official Italian news agency, Stefani, said the demonstration was one of "disdain" for the "nonsense" of the London radio—which has alleged that riots occurred in Rome—and intended also to show "the most lively solidarity for the Italian and German comrades who, side by side, are fighting valorously against the common enemy for the common ideal of justice."

No reinforcement of guards around the American Embassy occurred, as was necessary last week during a demonstration before the United States Consulate at Turin.

Il Giornale d'Italia appeared with a denunciation by its authoritative editor, Virginio Gayda, of proposed United States help to Britain.

Gayda, who usually expresses the views of Premier Mussolini, asserted the "unconfessed but dominant aim" of the United States was the defense of plutocracy, not democracy.

This, Gayda continued, was why President Roosevelt had not asked Britain for a clear definition of her reasons for war.

He cited as evidence of "plutocratic domination" of Britain a statement which he attributed to John Wilmot, Laborite member of the British House of Commons, that a privileged class of 400,000 persons holds fortunes totaling £12,000,000,000 ($48,000,000,000).

2 More Blood-Bank Benefits Planned

American Automobile Association, the Junior Board of Commerce office in the Star Building and at the door, Hough said.

Miss Aileen Ehmsen, of the Children's Hospital staff, was a guest of the board at its weekly luncheon yesterday at the Annapolis Hotel. Specifically illustrating the blood bank's value, she told of an injured boy whose life was saved by a prompt transfusion and of a girl patient who was successfully treated with serum rushed here by plane from Philadelphia.

Immediate procurement of the serum was made possible through the blood and serum bank fund, which was established in 1939 by receipts of the first of an annual series of benefit parties. This year, as in 1939 and 1940, the drive is under auspices of The Washington Post, the American Contract Bridge League and Station WJSV.

A newcomer to the official sponsor list is the American Legion, Department of the District of Columbia, whose extensive participation in last year's campaign was responsible for a large percentage of the $7,800 which was raised.

Although the date has not yet been decided, the Legion's Government Printing Office Post, which contributed more than $750 last year, again will give a benefit party.

These large-scale programs are separate and apart from the scores of parties in private homes which will be held this month, many of them next week—Valentine's Week is the "theme period" of the drive.

Persons desiring souvenir tally tickets or further information may obtain same by calling at The Post or writing the Blood Bank Editor, in care of this newspaper.

5 Latin Nations Act to Form Economic Bloc

By Gale D. Wallace
United Press Staff Writer

Montevideo, Feb. 6.—The River Plate regional economic conference in its final session today passed draft conventions and resolutions laying the groundwork for the first important economic bloc in South America.

The work represents a triumph for Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia in face of an extraordinary number of conflicting national interests which in normal times would have blocked any such basic agreements.

The draft conventions are not only aimed at the immediate intensification of trade and production but also established the principle of an eventual customs union which the contracting powers have undertaken to study.

One of the most important conventions passed by the conference was the draft submitted by the tariff committee recommending that Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay renounce most-favored-nation treatment for themselves for the next ten years to bring economic relief to Paraguay and Bolivia, the two landlocked and underprivileged countries in South America.

Four other drafts were submitted the tariff commiteee and approved by the conference. They were (1) the study of a customs union, (2) abolition of tariffs on perishable goods, (3) cooperation to suppress contraband, and (4) increased circulation of books and printed matter to the exclusion of propaganda.

The committee on economic affairs submitted the following drafts: (1) the study of uniform consular fees; (2) the facilitating of trade in pharmaceutical products produced by the five powers; (3) reciprocal preferential treatment for raw materials and manufactured goods in order to increase the consuming capacities of the five countries; (4) the establishment of a commercial arbitration board; (5) a request that the Pan-American Union accelerate the study of a sanitary police institute with a recommendation that the contracting powers proceed with the negotiation of bilateral sanitation agreements; (6) the study of better banking and exchange facilities, the establishment of national bank branches in all the River Plate countries, bilateral agreements for mutual financing of trade relations, and the establishment of exchange stabilization funds in the national banks of the five powers.

The Gallup Poll

Sharp Sectional Differences in Sentiment Noted on President's Lease-Lend Bill

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. Feb. 6.—Public sentiment in the New England and Middle Atlantic States, as measured by an Institute survey, is favorable to the President's lease-lend bill by a fair-sized majority, but opinion in the East Central States is much more evenly divided. In the area comprising Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan the number of voters who oppose passage of the lease-lend bill is almost as large as the number who favor it.

These results, emphasizing the fact that opinion on the bill splits geographically, are part of the Institute's Nation-wide survey on the lease-lend controversy. Ballots from the New England, Middle Atlantic and East Central area were the first to come in. The vote of the Nation as a whole, will be reported Sunday.

This study found that more than four persons in every five had heard of the lease-lend bill now being debated in Congress.

The survey put this question to a national cross-section:

"Do you think Congress should pass the President's lease-lend bill?"

Results for the three sections named are as follows:

	New Eng & Mid-Atlantic	East Central
As Long as War Lasts	35%	31%
Limited Period	56	59
No Opinion	9	10

Yes 54%

NEW ENGLAND & MIDDLE ATLANTIC STATES

Yes	54%
No	21
Qualified Answers	16
No Opinion	9

EAST CENTRAL STATES (Ohio, Ill., Ind., Mich.)

Yes	39%
No	35
Qualified Answers	17
No Opinion	9

The sharp sectional difference over the bill is apparent at a glance. Whereas only 21 per cent in the New England and Middle Atlantic area are definitely opposed to passage of the bill as it now stands, in the East Central area the opposition is considerably larger, 35 per cent.

Approximately one voter in every six in all three areas has a qualified opinion on the bill, and the qualifications have to do with certain amendments to the measure. Among the amendments desired by those giving qualified answers are a time limit on the power granted to the President by the bill, an amendment providing for a Congressional advisory committee to work with the President in administering the measure, a prohibition against sending American merchant ships or warships abroad, and a prohibition against sending American soldiers abroad. Some of these amendments, notably the time limit, were attached to the bill when it came out of the House Committee.

Republican leaders on Capitol Hill struck a responsive chord when they insisted that a time limit be placed on the life of the bill, for the public sees eye to eye with them on that score.

Evidence of this comes from another question put to voters in the survey, as follows:

"If Congress does pass this bill, should the powers which it grants to the President be given him for as long as the war lasts, or for a limited period of time, such as two years?"

U. S., Mexico Expect to Sign Pact on Property Claims

By Lloyd Lehrbas
Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States and Mexico, it was learned authoritatively yesterday, expect to sign a comprehensive "good neighbor" agreement in the very near future, settling all major economic and financial questions.

The pact, it was understood, will provide for a general, all-inclusive disposition of "every problem between the two nations." A number of points involved have been pending for several years and involve millions of dollars.

The formulae for the agreement were worked out by Undersecretary of State Welles and Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, the Mexican Ambassador. They were said to have concentrated on a lump settlement, rather than a piece-meal disposal of numerous claims and counter-claims.

Final arrangements for the pact probably will follow the return of the Mexican Ambassador here Friday, after conferences with his foreign office in Mexico City.

One of the major questions scheduled to be settled arose in 1938 from the Mexican government's expropriation of American, British and Dutch-owned oil properties, valued by the oil companies at from $400,000,000 to $440,000,000, but appraised at only $35,400,000 by Mexican courts.

State Department officials declined to disclose what payment had been proposed for the oil properties, or the manner in which any payment would be made.

New York financial interests estimated the American-owned companies—Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of New York, and Continental Oil (Sinclair)—had properties in Mexico worth $200,000,000.

The Sinclair interests, whose holdings represented an estimated $16,000,000, made a separate settlement of their claim in May, 1940, for $8,500,000 payable over three years.

Other extensive American claims resulted from the Mexican government's large scale expropriation of American-owned land and property under its agrarian program, and a number of general claims resulted from alleged seizures of property dating back 70 years.

ing results, the Old Dominion reception center will be ready for selectee contingents as early as February 21, although the first trainees are scheduled to arrive there March 3.

The large reception area at Camp Lee will be capable of housing 1,000 selects at a time as well as a Regular Army service cadre of 100.

The Army base will also include two large-scale replacement centers, for the Quartermaster and Medical Corps. A total of 22,000 troops will move into Camp Lee by March 15.

The March induction will be run off on this schedule: Recruits numbering 158 will report at Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory March 3, and 157 will be sworn in on March 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 10.

Breakdown of the over-all city quota by local boards will be announced today. Physical examinations to complete sufficient Class 1-A classifications for the March induction will be held February 13, 17, 20 and 21.

To insure an adequate number of registrants passing the medical tests, local boards have ordered 2,500 a record-breaking number, to undergo them at local hospitals.

Present plans call for a total of 1,500 District men to report at Baltimore induction headquarters in order to furnish the required 1,100. The rate of rejection of candidates by Army doctors still averages between 15 and 20 per cent.

license to practice surgery when he applied."

Refraining from extravagant gestures and standing in a fixed position squarely in front of the jury box during the greater part of his statement, Leahy charged that GHA today offers little to subscribers and that it is doing "practically nothing" for HOLC employes, for whom it was originally intended.

The defense counsel's opening statement in District Court, with Justice James M. Proctor presiding, came on the eve of the presentation of evidence in a case which is expected to consume at least six weeks.

At 10 a. m. today, the prosecution will take over, offering as its first witness Dr. Hugh Cabot, well-known liberal surgeon and critic of the American Medical Association, of which he was for many years a member. At present he is the head of Medical and Surgical Associates in Boston, a consumers' cooperative comparable to Group Health Association.

Dr Davis to Testify

Following the fiery Dr. Cabot on the stand will be Dr. Michael Davis, a Ph.D. rather than an M.D., who for more than two decades has been identified with socio-medical committees of the Rockefeller Foundation and the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

Both men are advocates of the group practice of medicine. That is, plans by which the services and facilities of physicians and clinics are pooled into a cooperative enterprise that gives medical care to subscribers on a so-much-per-month basis.

Group Health Association, which now has approximately 3,000 members, is such a venture.

Grant W. Kelleher, who, with John Henry Lewin, is conducting the Department of Justice anti-trust case against the doctors, announced in the course of his outline to the jury that Dr. Cabot and Dr. Davis would be the prosecution's first witnesses.

These outsiders will demonstrate, he promised, the public need for such cooperatives as GHA and how the movement is spreading in spite of opposition by the American Medical Association.

Defends Clinics

The service which these clinics dispense is quite up to par with that given by the average physician in private practice, said Kelleher. He charged the A. M. A. with going so far in its alleged campaign of intimidation as to censure the American College of Surgeons for indorsing, in 1934, continued experimentation with group medical care plans.

Principal organization of American surgeons and the "bureau of standards" for ethical hospitals, the A. C. S. is closely associated with the A. M. A.

Kelleher pointed out that even while G. H. A. was voluntarily petitioning for a court decision in 1938 to determine whether it was violating the District's insurance or healing arts laws, the District Medical Society was impatiently expelling Dr. Mario Scandiffio.

Now medical director of the G. H. A. clinic, Dr. Scandiffio at that time was the staff's pediatrician, previously having been engaged in private practice.

At about the same time the society was throwing out Dr. Scandiffio because he had joined the group, Kelleher said, the Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society was filing similar charges against Dr. Selders, then head of the clinic staff.

Accuses Academy of Surgery

The Harris County and District societies, as well as the A. M. A. and the Washington Academy of Surgery, are defendants in the Government's restraint of trade suit, along with the 20 individual physicians—15 Washington practitioners and five officials of the national body.

Kelleher accused the Washington Academy of Surgery of instructing five Capital hospitals to deny their facilities to Dr. Selders and charged Dr. Morris Fishbein and Dr. Olin West with disparaging G. H. A. to a young physician who had asked their advice before applying for a clinic post.

Both of these men are defendants. Dr. Fishbein is editor of the influential A. M. A. Journal and Dr. West is secretary and general manager of the association.

The real motive behind the organized doctors' opposition was the fear of competition, not altruistic concern for the public welfare, according to Kelleher. Many members of the local society realized G. H. A. "had every reason to succeed," he said.

Calls Attitude "Harsh"

Earlier, winding up the statement to the jury which he began Wednesday, Lewin cited what he called the District society's "insidious" action to keep G. H. A. staff men out of Washington hospitals, whose "harsh, outrageous and unreasonable" treatment he blamed upon the society and its members.

He stated the case of a woman member of the cooperative who, seriously ill, was rushed to a hospital and given morphine preparatory to surgery, only to be sent back out again "in a dazed condition" because Dr. Selders was not eligible to operate upon her.

In his rebuttal to this charge, Leahy said the woman had two witnesses with her when she was admitted to the hospital—"they're always building up evidence"—and Dr. Selders knew full well in advance that he would not be permitted to operate in that institution since his courtesy card had expired and had not been renewed.

It had not been renewed, Leahy explained, because of the cloud still hanging over G. H. A. as to its legality. Justice Jennings Bailey subsequently ruled, in July of 1938, that Group Health Association was neither engaged illegally in the corporate practice of medicine nor as an insurance company.

Leahy deprecated G. H. A. and its "check off" system for payment of dues, its requirement of physical examinations for prospective members, its method of getting started with a $40,000 HOLC "loan" whose legality he held to be in doubt.

Maj. Gen. Merrite W. Ireland, World War Surgeon General of the Army, declined an offer to become the association's first medical director on the ground "it was an entering wedge into state-controlled medicine," said Leahy.

The crew:

Technical Sergt. K. H. Gilreath; Staff Sergt. Everett Crabb; Sergt. J. P. Davies; Sergt. E. S. Trainer; Sergt. F. S. Whidden; Pvt. C. E. Applegate.

Capt. Freeman, of Winamac, Ind., was in command of the plane, which only recently had made a one-stop flight from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Sacramento to test extreme cold-weather equipment. It had departed from Sacramento and reported regularly until its last contact with Salt Lake Air Corps base at 12:22 p. m. when it was flying in the vicinity of Lovelock.

Five private planes from Reno and CCC enrollees from Camp Lovelock put out in search of the plane after hours passed with no further word.

James Hall, CCC enrollee working on the side of Ragged Top, said he saw a plane apparently in distress.

"It flew over to the other side of the mountain," he said. "I heard it crash. Then there was smoke and flames."

A railroad section foreman and a rancher, James Kjeldsen, also reported they had seen a plane crash. The foreman said the plane burst into flames after striking the mountain top.

Undertakers reached the scene at 4 p. m., but under instructions from Col. Fred C. Nelson, commander of McClellan Field, were not permitted to touch any bodies which might disturb the wreckage pending arrival of an investigating board. The two bodies which had been thrown clear of the wreck were returned to the Eddy mortuary at Winnemucca.

Freeman was a West Point graduate of 1930, a former student at Notre Dame University and was highly regarded by technical officers at Lowry Field.

12 Die in Canadian Airliner Crash

Toronto, Ontario, Feb. 6 (INS).—Twelve persons were killed today in Canada's worst commercial air tragedy when a huge airliner crashed into snow-covered underbrush less than a mile from an emergency landing field at which it was to have stopped.

Everyone aboard was killed when the ship hurtled to the earth. The dead were all Canadians—nine passengers, including one woman and the three-person crew of pilot, copilot and stewardess.

Those killed were:

Crew members—Capt. W. E. Twiss, First Officer Charles Lloyd, and Stewardess Miss M. G. Mayne.

Pilot Killed, Another Hurt in Air Collision

By the United Press

Wyandanch, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Two Army pursuit planes of the fast Curtiss P-40 type collided and crashed today, killing Lieut. John H. Eakin, 25, a native of Washington, D. C.

Second Lieut. Joseph P. H. Laycock, 23, of Baton Rouge, La., escaped by parachute with only an ankle injury and bruises.

The planes, in which the pilots were practicing maneuvers at 2,000 feet, fell much of the distance locked together but finally separated and crashed within 1,500 feet of each other. Both caught fire but Eakin's crushed body was found unburned a few feet from the plane. His parachute partly covered the body, indicating he had jumped in the last few moments of the fall but too near the ground for the parachute to open.

Eakin's body was taken to the funeral establishment where preparations were being made to ship the body of Lieut. Sherman E. Denny, killed Tuesday when a wing of his P-40 came off in a power dive, to the home of Denny's parents in San Diego, Calif.

Lieut. Eakin was graduated from the Air Corps Primary Flying School in 1935, and the following year from the Advanced School, attack course. Two years ago he earned a bachelor of science degree at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His mother, Mrs. W. D. Eakin, lives at McLean, Va.

Tobey Demands Senate Probe Into Funds of U. S. Cafes

By James D. Secrest

A demand that the Senate Rules Committee investigate the Welfare and Recreational Association, which feeds most Government employes in Washington, brought a retort from Samuel Goodacre, president, last night that he would be "happy to have the Senate investigate our activities."

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who already has tackled the Hague political machine and an alleged radio monopoly, charged the association with "loose handling of funds" and a "flippant disregard of law."

Basing his attack on the year-old report of the General Accounting Office, Senator Tobey told the Senate that the nonprofit-making organization of Federal workers owes the Treasury $281,000 under terms of a contract to share the profits from its manifold operations.

Senator Tobey called the association "an illegitimate child," because it was organized in 1927 by Government officials without authorization by Congress.

Goodacre admitted that both its legality and the interpretation of its contract with the Government have been challenged in the past, but he declared that the association has offered to submit the questions to court or an arbitration board of Federal officials.

Frank W. Hoover, $9,000-a-year director, who was said by Tobey to have "withheld from the directors and trustees information regarding irregularities which in all conscience and good practice should have been given to them," termed the Senator's charges "absurd" and "ridiculous."

The association not only has accumulated no profits, he said, but it soon will be forced to borrow $100,000 to finance expansions necessitated by the growth in governmental personnel.

The GAO report was made by the then comptroller general to Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody on January 29, 1940. Officials of the Welfare and Recreational Association submitted a detailed reply to the charges to Carmody on March 12, last. No action has been taken by the FWA administrator.

"Under the alleged contract," said Tobey, "the associaton was to turn one-half the profits over to the Government after building up a specified reserve account. Auditors of the GAO have gone over all the association and found many irregularities.

"They found, for example, that a minimum of $261,000 which belonged to the Government has been withheld and this has not been paid up to the present time."

Goodacre said that accountants differed as to whether or not the association owes the Government any more money under the contract.

"The association started on a shoe string," he said, "and has never asked an appropriation of Congress. It has paid $200,000 into the Treasury and installed $300,000 worth of fixtures in Government buildings."

Hoover said that the association has no reserve fund despite the fact it is obligated to replace all Government equipment which wears out while in use.

War Department Blames Air-Crash Rise on Expansion

By the Associated Press

A series of crashes involving Army planes drew from the War Department last night a statement that the number, but not the rate of accidents had mounted because of the increased operations of the expanding Air Corps.

"The recent fatalities, while conspicuous, are not indications of an increased accident rate," the statement said.

"The War Department states that the accident rate has been steadily decreasing over a period of years, but with greatly increased volume of training and operations the actual number of accidents increases proportionately while the rate remains the same.

"The lowering rate of accidents is due to the higher physical and mental standards of pilot material, the excellence of the Army training system and the quality of the aircraft.

"All of these standards must be maintained in order to protect the flying personnel in the face of increased pressure on training and the greater speeds and performance of modern aircraft."

Crisis 'At Base Is Spiritual,' Rector Says

"This international crisis is at base a spiritual crisis; religion is the only ultimate foundation of morality, and we have been running short," Dr. Arthur L. Kinsolving, rector, Trinity Episcopal Church, Princeton, N. J., told the Cosmopolitan Club meeting yesterday at the Carlton Hotel.

"In an hour of dire need, we have a high chance now to rediscover what primitive Christianity was and what real Christianity still is—a religion of salvation; though the term has been tarnished by our dull handling, men everywhere are looking for redemption, and nowhere short of God can we find grest hope that a bad situation can be translated into a good situation," said Dr. Kinsolving, one of the leaders of the National Christian Mission in Washington this week.

Survival of the Fittest

"It is overnaive to hope to save civilization by imposing discipline upon society when we are unwilling to discipline ourselves."

"In this universe, that survives which is fit to survive. Therefore the Christian need not lose courage in the midst of this wholesale destruction. Man can only destroy the prints, for God holds the negatives."

At the luncheon of the Junior Board of Commerce, at the Annapolis Hotel, Dr. Adolf Keller, of Geneva, Switzerland, general secretary of the European Central Office for Inter-Church Aid, said:

"Perhaps democracies have failed on the continent because they did not live up to their own ideals. We have, therefore, to rethink the very foundations of democracy and liberty.

"If the democracies are willing to rethink their principles they will find a new stimulus in the Gospel to rebuild the house of liberty and democracy which today is menaced by an earthquake."

Harry N. Holmes, field secretary, World Alliance on International Friendship through the Churches, speaking at the Kiwanis Club luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, said:

"The spiritual and religious essence is the final significance of American democracy, and democracy must forever depend on and forever safeguard freedom of worship, freedom of assembly, freedom of speech and freedom of press. Man born 'in the image of God' (the cardinal principle of the Christian message) can never become the chattel of totalitarianism."

Poor Children 'Live in Dump,' Cleric Asserts

"Elephants live in a palace in Washington—while needy children live in a dump."

Thus, Dr. James Holmes, of California and Arizona, a worker in the National Christian Mission, yesterday contrasted the elephant house at the Zoo with Receiving Home for Children.

He paid a visit to both, to gather information for his job in arousing church forces to take more interest in problems of delinquency and crime in their own communities. In 18 cities, he is doing this work with the mission.

"I'm told the elephant house cost $300,000. Yet the proposed plans for a new Receiving Home, I understand, have been cut from a $175,000 to a $100,000 building," he said. That means that the gymnasium will have to be cut out. Children don't need to play, I suppose. But I notice that two of the elephants have a private swimming pool, each.

"Now, don't mistake me. In the name of science and for the children, let's have a zoo. But in the name of humanity, let's have a sense of proportion between what is done for the children and for the animals."

A native of Yorkshire, he came to this country 24 years ago and became an American citizen. He is now director of evangelism for the Baptist Home Mission Society in Arizona. Short and stocky, with white hair and a ruddy face, Dr Holmes speaks with zeal of the "desperate necessity in this country for putting more money into a rehabilitation program."

He said he had paid a visit to the National Training School for Boys, where he found "a good staff doing a good job." But he said he had found the juvenile delinquency program in the District "undermanned."

conduct go up or down?" he asked, at another point in his talk.

He ended by telling his listeners how to "look up and laugh and love and live."

Dr. Jones Speaks

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, speaking on "Suffering in a Modern World," at a mass meeting at Vermont Avenue Baptist Church last night, said:

"A great deal of pain is wasted because we do not take it up into the alchemy of our lives and transmute it into higher forms . . . When we came to the Versailles Treaty, we could have coined our pain into reconstruction . . . But we wasted the world's pain by letting hate and revenge creep into the treaty. And that hate and revenge messed up the relationship between Germany and the Allies.

"Many of us are afraid the same thing will happen now. The world is going through an astonishing amount of pain. Will it be wasted in futile hatreds, or will it be taken hold of and turned into a new just world? . . . The pain of this hour can be death pains or birth pains. It is for us to decide which it shall be."

Meeting Hears Londoner

Muriel Lester, of London, noted social worker, at a mass meeting at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church last night, said:

"Let us outtrain the totalitarians! Let us become the trainees of the spirit—people who are willing to be full or empty, rich or poor, popular or persecuted, dead or alive, so long as we are in God's universe and fulfilling our destiny according to His will."

Speaking of Britain's and America's responsibility in the war in China, Miss Lester said:

"Chinese brothers and sisters have been forced to eat the bark of trees, and both they and the Japanese know what we try to forget, that the Japanese could not have done this evil to them if Britain and America had not sold her—at a good profit—the oil and scrap iron she clamored for.

"Our young people know that our hands are reeking with Chinese blood. No wonder a good many of them do not take our Christianity seriously.

"Save Us From Systems"

"People were appalled by reading in the papers some months ago of a group of New York men who would commit a murder for $5. But it seems to me inevitable that such decadence should occur when we, who are supposed to be Christians, are so careless about other people."

Dr. Rogers T. Nooe, pastor of Vine Street Christian Church, Nashville, Tenn., at a mass meeting at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, said that at the end of last World War "we celebrated a victory instead of being on our knees praying for worlds to mend. It will save us from hysteria and hate in this time of war to follow the path of individual and corporate penitence, accepting our blame for the condition of the world."

"Christian people have a tremendous responsibility resting on them today to keep the fellowship with all Christians throughout the world despite barriers of race and nation," he said. "Out of these centers, once this world catastrophe passes, is the hope of building a world of brotherhood, creating with God a new order in which freedom to worship Him shall be everywhere and freedom to grow souls will be the priceless heritage of all peoples."

Mothers' Guidance Stressed

Messages from the National Christian Mission were sounded in numerous other locations throughout the city.

Mrs. Hilda L. Ives, of Newton Center, Mass., speaking at the Women's Christian Life Forum at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, said "The only true and patriotic home today is the home where children are learning of God and finding Him real, for God's resources have been proved through the centuries to be the first defense of any country, without which all man-made Maginot lines will never hold.

"The responsibility of the mothers of America at this moment is awesome. They must create citizens for a republic which will stand, without flinching, all onslaughts of evil; that will take the lead in the way of brotherhood and peace, and that will give allegiance to the supreme personality of all ages, Jesus."

Dr. C. Jeffares McCombe, of New York City, told the ministers' meeting yesterday at Calvary Baptist Church: "Before men and nations sin, they must erase a consciousness of God. It is for that reason we are convinced that the indispensable need of America and of the world is a recovery of the sense of God."

"Has No Equal"

Speaking at the same meeting, Dr. Charles T. Holman, of the divinity school, University of Chicago, said: "The Christian Church provides a sustaining fellowship for burdened persons which has no equal in any other community on earth."

Bishop Thomas C. Darst, of Wilmington, N. C., Episcopal Diocese of East Carolina, at the Mission's noon meeting at Epiphany Church yesterday, said:

"What part must we play in making God's Kingdom come on earth? We need a great loyalty—to God, to Jesus, to the Church, to our own ideal. We need a great fellowship with the family of God, made up of all races meeting around a table of love. We need a great hope that will send us on until 'faith is lost in sight and patient hope is crowned,' and we must have a great surrender of self to the high call of God."

The New NLRB

Many of the difficulties which the National Labor Relations Board has encountered might have been avoided if that agency had been set up originally with the care which is now apparently going into its reorganization. Part of the anticipated improvement will come from changes in personnel, but the new structural pattern is also much more in keeping with the task which the NLRB has to perform.

Apparently the board is trying to achieve a division of functions similar to that suggested for nearly all quasi-judicial agencies in the recent Acheson report. A new administration division will supervise the issuance of complaints. More responsibility will be given to trial examiners and less reliance will be placed upon review attorneys in formulating the board's findings. This partial separation of the prosecuting and adjudicating functions does not yet go far enough, but certainly it will be an improvement upon the methods formerly employed.

The Acheson committee, which made a searching inquiry into the problems of administrative agencies at the request of the President, suggests that trial examiners be replaced by hearing commissioners. Those officials would serve seven-year terms after appointment by an Office of Federal Administrative Procedure on nomination by the various agencies. Obviously they would thus attain a large measure of independence. And their findings would be allowed to stand, except for review by the agency heads or the courts through formal appeals.

In the absence of any machinery for appointing such hearing commissioners at present, the proposed reform cannot yet be adopted in toto. It is nonetheless encouraging to note that the NLRB, on its own initiative, is moving in the right direction.

Folklore Of Mr. Arnold

The sensation of Thurman Arnold on finding himself in Boston, when he fondly believed himself to be in Washington, must have been rather like that of Lewis Carroll's character who

> Thought he saw a rattlesnake
> That questioned him in Greek.
> He looked again and saw it was
> The middle of next week.

It was the second time within a few hours that Mr. Arnold had had occasion to discover how rapidly one can make progress in reverse. His first setback was administered by the Supreme Court in handing down a decision that cramps the style of his antiracket campaign. Indeed, it may have been the reasoning of that opinion which caused him to settle down in the wrong berth in the wrong car, which would be presently hitched to the wrong train.

On finding himself some 150 miles or more behind the point from which he had started, the only thing left for Mr. Arnold to do was to catch the first plane out of Boston for Washington. And this he did in spite of the opportunity he knew it would give to those of his critics who like to accuse him of a tendency to go up in the air about almost anything.

Not Yet Hopeless

The Department of Justice, in filing suit against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, has taken the second major step toward solution of the dispute which has kept much familiar music off the air since January 1. The first step was taken late last month when Broadcast Music, Inc., the supply house set up by the broadcasters, agreed to abstain from various practices challenged under the antitrust laws, when and if ASCAP accepts similar restraints.

The Government filed its criminal information against ASCAP in Milwaukee after the society's directors had failed to confer with Department of Justice attorneys during a 48-hour period of grace. ASCAP offered no official explanation of its silence. But the fact is that when ASCAP's directors met in New York a smoldering internal dispute flared anew and burned the bridge to Washington. It is reported that since the unsuccessful negotiations of December, and especially since BMI consented to a decree, the requirements for an agreement which would satisfy the Government and forestall criminal action have been tightened. Attorneys of the Justice Department do not deny that BMI's tractability has changed the general picture.

Hope for an amicable settlement need not be abandoned, however. The Justice Department has emphasized that its action does not close the door to negotiations. An agreement on the monopolistic issue would clear the way for some attack on the practical cause of the deadlock, which is this question: What is an acceptable price for the right to broadcast ASCAP music?

Diplomatic Reshuffle

When the Hitler earthquake hit Europe, it uprooted our diplomats along with the governments to which they were accredited. For the protocol governing such matters is that the diplomats must stick to the governments, not to their legations or embassies. Thus Anthony J. Drexel Biddle hung onto the Polish government in its cross-country flight and came home only after the Polish government in Poland had ceased to exist. This applies also to Mrs. Harriman, who clung to the fleeing Norwegian government long after it had been lost to the world's view and was hopping from one mountain village to another.

Now these scattered governments are in exile, and the President, in making new diplomatic appointments, has insured that we are still attached directly to them by diplomatic representation. The reattachment is more than a formal tie. It is one more piece of evidence of our antipathy to the New Order in Europe which Hitler is trying to fasten onto the European democracies through his gauleiters. Mr. Biddle, accordingly, remains Ambassador to Poland, but it is Poland-in-London. At the same time he takes on three more assignments to countries whose governments also are located in the British capital: Norway, Belgium and the Netherlands. The absence of Denmark will be noticed, but the situs of the Danish government continues to be in Copenhagen, though the Danes, no less than the other peoples who used to be loosely associated as the Oslo states, are no whit behind the others in their passion for liberation. Of the envoys to the four Oslo states which were invaded, Mrs. Harriman and our Ambassador to Belgium, John Cudahy, have retired. Both of them did sterling work at their dangerous posts, and Mrs. Harriman in particular deserves an accolade. At great risk to life and limb this intrepid woman made her mission to Oslo an outstanding chapter in the spectacular story of our wartime diplomacy.

It is strange to read that Jay Pierrepont Moffat, in Ottawa, is to take over a concurrent assignment to Luxembourg. But official Luxembourg is now enjoying Canadian hospitality. By contrast the other appointments sound quite prosaic, though they all have their particular interest. Foresight is shown in the transfer of Alexander Kirk to Egypt. Mr. Kirk, who is counselor in the Rome Embassy, is one of our ablest and most experienced career diplomatists. It is a wise decision to send him to a country which may one of these days be in the very center of the world maelstrom. The China-Australia swap will give Nelson T. Johnson a respite from the rigors of life in Chungking. At the same time we shall not be represented in China by what, on the China coast, they call a "griffin," or an inexperienced envoy; for Clarence E. Gauss has served most of his consular life in Cathay.

The major appointment is, of course, the one which puts John G. Winant in the place of Joseph P. Kennedy. This is Mr. Winant's initial venture in diplomacy. But experience isn't the first essential for the post in London, especially in this grave crisis in our international relations. The man that is needed in London is one who is so like-minded with our President that the British will know that they are hearing the Presidential accents when he speaks. Mr. Winant fits this need. If he isn't an alter ego like Mr. Hopkins, at least he shares Mr. Roosevelt's ideals, is a keen observer at a time when the President requires information on what the British are thinking as well as doing, and has a deep-seated sympathy with the cause for which the British are fighting. The British required some such sustenance after Mr. Kennedy. If most of the diplomatic roads have led to London, that is because the embattled democracies of Europe now are making their last stand under the benign wing of the Mother of Parliaments. May she stand four square till the earthquake has spent its force and the little governments in the British capital are back again in their several capitals!

Belgian Gold

About $260,000,000 of gold shipped from Belgium to France in advance of the Nazi invasion is reported to be on its way back to the Bank of Belgium. In other words, this gold is to be put at the disposal of the Nazi rulers of that country. Since the exiled government of Belgium, with headquarters in London, is powerless to prevent the transfer, it has taken initial steps to secure compensation from the French authorities by attaching funds of the Bank of France held by the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

This litigation throws very little light upon a highly confused situation. As the funds of both France and Belgium have been "frozen" by executive decree, a transfer of credits from France to Belgium—such as is now demanded—might not appear at first thought to be a matter of immediate practical concern. But if the exiled Belgian government should succeed in establishing its right to compensation, the gold that it would thereby gain could be converted into dollars at the discretion of the Treasury and possibly used to wage war in Africa and elsewhere. Moreover, such a decision would undoubtedly stiffen resistance of the peoples of invaded countries to further German demands involving spoliation of this kind.

The Belgian claim thus emphasizes the need for a clarification of policy in the handling of funds belonging to the exiled governments and the nationals of invaded countries. Responsibility for deciding what government to recognize rests with the Department of State. So its wishes should, generally speaking, guide the Secretary of the Treasury and the Reserve Banks, especially since access to and utilization of foreign-owned funds may profoundly affect the course of political events.

Nemesis

From a military point of view the six-pronged British drive into Italian East Africa is of minor importance in comparison with the spectacularly successful offensive they have been waging in Libya. The symbolic significance of the fighting in Eritrea, Somalia and Ethiopia is, however, very great indeed, and will not be lost on Italians. For it proves that Nemesis is beginning to overtake Mussolini, not to say the Italians for having suffered Mussolini all these years. Like Milo, the Duce now finds himself "wedged in that timber which he strove to wield."

When, in October, 1935, Mussolini ordered the blackshirt legions into Ethiopia, a nation whose territorial integrity Italy had given its solemn pledge to respect, he took the first long step in his own and his nation's undoing. The prize looked glittering. Haile Selassie's kingdom was large and undeveloped. Its conquest and exploitation, Italians were told, would make them rich. But the Ethiopian venture, successful though it temporarily proved to be from a military point of view, has borne only Dead Sea fruit for the harassed people of the Italian peninsula. To make Ethiopia part of the Italian Empire much Italian blood and treasure had to be squandered. Even then the task could never have been successfully accomplished had it not been for the acquiescence of the British and French governments. It was they who kept League of Nations' sanctions against Italy from being applied with the force which, as is now plain, the situation demanded. But, having shaken off the feeble restraints which the League had sought to impose on him, Mussolini before very long found himself bound by the far more onerous chains of the Axis. The Ethiopian War provided the setting which enabled Hitler to fortify the Rhineland and later to annex Austria—the country which had stood as a buffer between Italy and the Third Reich. Mussolini thus found himself a prisoner of his erstwhile disciple.

Now his cup of bitterness is being filled to the brim. Though Italy has made vast sacrifices to add Ethiopia to the Italian Empire, she now finds her hold over that region precarious indeed. British troops have moved into various parts of Italian East Africa. In Eritrea they have captured the important railhead of Agordat and are pressing down on Asmara. It may not be long before the port of Massaua is in their hands. At the same time British forces from Kenya are moving into Italian Somaliland, and others from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, aided by Abyssian tribesmen, are pressing on retreating Italian forces in Western Ethiopia. Everywhere, indeed, the Italians are in retreat. There is no alternative. The British fleet has cut them off from the sea route to Italy, and the drive of the British into Libya has made it impossible for any aid to reach them by plane. Graziani has too many troubles of his own to worry over the fate of the isolated Italian forces far off in East Africa.

So the story of the Italian venture in Ethiopia is approaching a new and far less glamorous climax than was envisaged on that May day in 1936 when Mussolini's legions marched into Addis Ababa and led to the proclamation of the Fascist Empire with Victor Emmanuel III as Emperor of Ethiopia.

LET US GO HOME.

Let us go home who have no home to go to,— Blasted and buried as the great bombs fall,
Alone and naked on a mound of rubble,
We have no home at all.

Our landmarks vanish: shrine and tower and palace;
Our meadows are with trench and crater scarred;
All that we love lies spoiled and desecrated;—
But what we love we guard.

If fate ordain for us a land in ruins
As our last monument, then be it said,
"They died with sword in hand. Now let the vultures Batten upon the dead."

But no, we shall endure! A nobler England
Shall from the wreckage and the whirlwind come,
Discovered only now, endeared by peril—
And this shall be our home.

Course Of History

A striking similarity exists between conditions of today and those of 1917. History indeed repeats itself. A quarter of a century ago, war was imminent, and it was almost universally agreed that the only way to save the world once and for all was to crush Germany. American blood and resources, no matter what the cost, were to be sacrificed to make not only America but the world safe for democracy. With high hopes the people rallied to what seemed a holy cause. Those few dissenting ones that did not share the belief that American aid to the Allies would save the earth, and opposed the Administration's policy, were treated with contempt and scorn. Men of the courageous caliber of Norris, Borah, La Follette, sr., Lindbergh, sr., and Eugene Debs became targets of ridicule and were labeled unpatriotic, stubborn and willful men. Eugene Debs, a martyr to the cause of peace, stated calmly that he was opposed to bloodshed and believed there were better ways of settling international problems than by sacrificing the lives of our American youth. This brave man was promptly imprisoned and languished in a Federal penitentiary until Harding gave him his freedom.

The scant minority that opposed our entrance into the first World War are today respected and their views vindicated. Years hence, the same may be said of the La Follettes, Wheelers and Lindberghs of today. Those politicians, who seek to foment war, should refresh their memories and recall our former effort to make the world safe for democracy ended in disaster.

On Dictatorships

It seems to me that the fundamental difference between democracy and dictatorships, as forms of government, is one of the methods used to bring a desired action. In democracy, every action is suggested by the people, debated from the viewpoint of the people and passed or rejected by the people through their representatives in Congress. In a dictatorship, a move may or may not be suggested by the people, is seldom debated by the people, and after being proclaimed by one individual, must be accepted by the people.

Without exception, the builders of the United States were refugees from dictatorships. They fled a form of government which they knew from years of experience—a form of government which their ancestors had known and struggled against for centuries before.

I hate the modern forms of dictatorships and I approve of aid to Britain and the other democracies. But I cannot drive the thought from my mind that in our feverish attempts to speed up this aid, we must not give all the power and responsibility to a few men. We must keep ourselves from adopting, ever so slightly, the methods of dictatorships. For if we adopt their methods in a struggle against them, we have voluntarily given up the thing for which we fight; we defeat our purpose before we begin.

From Allis-Chalmers Workers Union

It is very difficult to discover why the article in the Sunday Post of January 26 insists on placing the blame on Local 248 for a situation which the article itself demonstrates is the fault of the Allis-Chalmers Co. As the article states, Harold Story, vice president of the company, is the leader of the group in management which insists on fighting the union and in finding some excuse to destroy it. Mr. Friendly correctly states that the "bad situation has been long in the brewing." Yes, it has "been long in the brewing" and it has come to a head now because Mr. Story sees in national defense an excellent chance to complete his anti-C. I. O. plans.

Father Francis Haas, who is mediating in this strike, himself stated in a recent issue of the American Legislative Review that "to have harmony and cooperation in any industry, employers must regard the right of collective bargaining as 'finished business.'"

But to Mr. Story, collective bargaining with Local 248—the C. I. O.—has never been "finished business." He has never accepted the union completely and in good faith. Consequently, as The Post article relates, Mr. Story fostered a company-dominated works council for which the company was "100 per cent responsible." Mr. Story now confesses this.

In the 1940 negotiations, Story was pushed out of active leadership in the company picture, and the company group which was willing to work with 248 issued a letter promising that employes fighting 248 would be fired and that the company would not tolerate any future disruption by anti-C. I. O. forces. The importance of this letter is that it squarely places the blame for friction on the handful of anti-C. I. O. people whom it promises to eliminate.

On the basis of this letter, Local 248 tentatively accepted the company's proposals, to see if the anti-C. I. O. influence of Mr. Story was really on the ebb. A few months furnished the answer. Two men were fired—with juicy "dismissal" bonuses, antiunionists were given short lay-offs—but the antiunion activity increased. Why, Local 248 members asked? Because these lay-offs were with pay. Antiunion activity increased. And why not? There was real money in creating trouble in the plant. Huge dismissal bonuses, as much as $1,000 each.

Mr. Story definitely was not on the ebb. He was waxing, not waning. Otto Falk, chairman of the board and long the key figure in Allis-Chalmers Co. intrarelations, died during the summer of 1940, and Mr. Story used the death to increase his prestige and gather the anti-C. I. O. forces in the company around him.

Thus the whole Post story adds up to prove that the Allis-Chalmers Co., as long as Mr. Story is in the saddle, regards collective bargaining with the C. I. O. as "unfinished business." And that the anti-C. I. O. position of Mr. Story exactly coincides with every attempt to weaken Local 248.

As for the opinion expressed in The Post article that a small clique controls the union through a clause barring anyone from office who has not been paid up for 12 months, that is a provision of the international constitution and applies in all U. A. W. A. locals. Homer Martin once attacked us for not living up to the constitution. Now we are attacked for abiding by it too closely. And it is difficut to understand how any paper can feel sorry for a few people who are so enthusiastic for their union that they can't pay their dues long enough to make them eligible to play the role of the modern Moses.

It is also significant that the charges of "anarchist" and "syndicalist" against brotherhood leaders during the World War period disappeared when the railroad operators decided that collective bargaining was "finished business." When the Allis-Chalmers Co. finally decides to remove the hostile Mr. Story and make its relations with the C. I. O. "finished business," the motive for hurling epithets against the C. I. O. leadership will also disappear. After all, the company must have some alibi to give the public for the antiunion conduct which The Post so effectively described.

Postwar Consideration

When hostilities cease and we are staggering under a debt of insurmountable proportions, what will be done with our great industrial plants, suited only to the production of war equipment for another nation, which has no further means, or demands, for the products, and what employment can be afforded the multitude of people employed in those enterprises? Our unemployment problems, since the first installment of this war, will be simple in comparison. The very existence of our Government will be at stake. If we enter the war and win on the battlefields of Europe, Africa or Asia, what profit will it be if we are confronted with internal destruction in the United States? Has interventionism placed the United States beyond the sphere of consideration? During great upheavals, the world sees only fragments of the truth.

Taking Stock

The idea is being advanced almost daily by various columnists and Government officials that the security of our country can only be assured if England wins the war; that if England goes down in defeat nothing can save the United States. Yet these same people profess to be opposed to taking steps that will involve the United States in war. If our safety is dependent on an English victory why should we withhold any aid to Great Britain—men, airplanes, ships or anything else? If it is certain that Germany is going to take on the United States as soon as she has conquered Great Britain, why shouldn't we go all the way and declare war on her?

I believe Col. Lindbergh is right in contending that the United States is in no danger of successful invasion by any power or combination of powers provided we take all reasonable steps to defend ourselves; that the British navy is not our only protection.

No one can deny that complete domination of Europe and Asia by the Axis will leave the United States in a decidedly uncomfortable position and for that reason aid to Britain short of war is justified. But how much better off would we be after a long bloody war such as would be necessary to destroy the Axis powers, and what would become of our democratic way of life while prosecuting such a war?

False Assumption?

Those who are misled by the idea that, as the Germans cannot cross 30 miles of Channel water to attack England, they cannot be expected to cross 3,000 miles of ocean to attack us, ignore what should be an obvious fact: That the Nazis are prevented from reaching England by a strong opposing sea and air force, the likes of which we would not be in a position to offer against Hitler should he possess the tremendous sea and air power that would be at his disposal should he conquer England.

Praising Pegler

Both The Post and Mr. Pegler should be given laurels for the series of articles on labor and labor leaders. I myself am a union man and so take with some grain of allowance all that Mr. Pegler recites. Still if only half is true, that half shows a condition which begs loudly for remedy. It is the truth that shall make us free, and in giving us at least some of the truth you and Mr. Pegler are performing a great public service. I congratulate you both on your courage and your public spirit, and may the ultimate results prove the wisdom of your joint efforts.

The Post Impressionist

Claim To Fame

Although my quite undistinguished name has twice appeared in a Broadway column, I submit as my sole claim to distinction the fact that I occupy a favored position on the Nazi blacklist.

True, the honor came my way in fairly routine, unexciting fashion; but, unless Heinrich Himmler's agents have relaxed their estimate of my nuisance value in the six months since I left Cuba, I confidently anticipate speedy liquidation when Der Tag comes.

As city editor of Havana's sole English-language morning daily for nearly three years it was my pleasurable duty to tear apart the Reich regularly in our editorial columns. Der Fuehrer easily became my whipping boy, since the paper's necessarily timorous editorial policy required that most topics be handled in the ". . . and now what will transpire?" pattern familiar to every newspaperman who has run his head against the Latin countries' twin walls of unofficial government censorship and American "interests." Each time I was ordered to gloss over Cuba's curious fiscal policy, or turn out a fighting editorial condemning some hapless cab driver for ruining the tourist trade, I relieved my feelings by castigating Hitler—discovering, in the process, hitherto unsuspected depths of invective.

My private war with the Supreme Leader proceeded uneventfully and virtually unacknowledged for three months, until the day my publisher was visited by a member of the Gestapo. He was one of several agents masquerading as clerks in the incredibly overstuffed Havana branch of Germany's largest steamship line.

"Your editorials indicate," he lectured, "a woeful lack of knowledge of true conditions in the new Germany." To put us on the right track, he offered, without charge, the full facilities of Goebbel's notorious Trans-Ocean Press Service. He was thrown out of the office.

Promptly, the steamship line canceled its advertising contract, a course of action followed in rapid succession by three other German firms. Two days later one of our advertising solicitors, a girl of Hamburg antecedents, resigned, tearfully explaining that she had relatives in Germany. My editorials increased in venom, especially after I learned that the steamship line's manager had suggested to the immigration authorities that I was a likely subject for deportation. Aside, however, from an unidentified offer over the phone to beat my head in if the paper didn't change its tone, direct action was shelved for several months. Instead, an ever-increasing pile of expensively bound propaganda pamphlets on my desk each morning testified to the concern the Gestapo felt for my education.

If it hadn't been for Hedvig, I might have assumed that I had fallen out of disfavor with my Nazi friends. Hedvig was an exceptionally pretty young German girl I met on a picnic excursion to the interior one bright Sunday. Our introduction was brief, and I had successfully progressed to the dinner-date stage when a friend in the group told her I was a newspaperman. Hedvig froze.

"You are that Donnelley?" she asked disbelievingly. She excused herself and moved hurriedly away.

Hedvig, I was informed by the embarrassed friend, worked at the German ministry. She confided to him later that she knew of me from her immediate superior, the press attache, who referred to me at livid intervals as "that irresponsible schweinhund!" Gone was the dinner date, but I was consoled by the knowledge that I hadn't lost any of my popularity.

Something of a surprise was the next Nazi overture. Shortly before the war broke out a German pocket battleship stopped briefly in Havana on a "good will" cruise. An invitation to a reception aboard was extended the American press corps. The German Minister paid me the singular compliment of phoning to suggest that he was anxious to have me attend. I refused, rather crudely, on the grounds that the champagne probably wouldn't be any more palatable than the ideology. From that point on, Hedvig told our mutual friend, I was promoted to the rank of "dirty, irresponsible schweinhund!"

Rather rightly, after war was declared, I assumed Hitler would be too busy to bother with me. Each day's mail brought more and more propaganda releases, but there were no further personal gestures. Through Hedvig, as time went by, I learned I was still considered an insolent enemy of the Reich, to be disposed of at the proper time. Shortly before I left Havana a self-styled German importer, obviously down on his luck, visited my office to repay one of several small loans I'd made him over a lengthy period.

"Since you are returning to the States," he confided abruptly, "I should tell you that I was formerly of the Gestapo. I am no longer—for reasons which will not interest you. This, however, should interest you . . ." And he informed me that I had been under close surveillance for over two years by the German secret police, who possessed, he claimed, a complete dozier on my case, listing my habits, background, my friends, the places I frequented—even the name of my Spanish teacher.

My final editorial, in which I called Hitler a "schweinhund," appeared the morning I left. When my boat sailed that night I assume the Gestapo was there to see me off.

On The Record

Hitler's Lost War

ON DECEMBER 15, 1940, Hitler made a peculiar gesture to France. With great pomp and ceremony he presented France with the remains of the Duke of Reichstadt, and those remains were solemnly interred in the tomb of Napoleon in the Invalides.

THOMPSON

IN FRANCE, the people grinned ironically and said: "He promised bread and he presents ashes." The hundred thousand inhabitants of French Lorraine, driven from their homes, wondered whether Hitler really thought that the ashes of the Duke of Reichstadt were compensation. The families of two million French prisoners of war thought that they would greatly prefer the return of their living husbands and sons to the corpse of the Duke of Reichstadt.

SINCE EVERYTHING Hitler does is the result of an inner compulsion and arises in his subconscious and neurotic mind, the mind of a man who once described himself as an "inspired somnambulist," we may well ask: Who was the Duke of Reichstadt?

The Duke of Reichstadt, who died at 22, was the "Austrian Boy," the ill-starred and unhappy son of a loveless marriage between the Emperor Napoleon I and the little Austrian Archduchess Marie Louise. To marry her and thus make permanent a great France embracing all Europe, Napoleon divorced his true love. The son of the Austrian was "Napoleon II," "King of Rome" and "Heir to the Holy Roman Empire." His birth led Napoleon to think that his dynasty was intrenched forever, but the "Austrian Boy", was outwitted by the complex of European politics, demoted to a trivial title and read out of European politics altogether.

Now, who, in Hitler's mind, is Hitler?

Is he not the Austrian Napoleon II, heir to the Holy Roman Empire—which represented the greatest extension in history of the German nation? Hitler, like Napoleon, has publicly laid claim to that empire of Charlemagne.

The loveless marriage between Austria and France which produced "Napoleon II," Duke of Reichstadt, actually, politically, produced nothing at all. The Duke of Reichstadt is a symbol of utter disappointment and defeat. The Austrian did not enlarge and inherit the vast empire that his father built. Instead, he died young.

Hitler, you remember, when he visited Paris as the conqueror, was disappointed in the tomb of Napoleon. He wanted it made more imposing. But he sent the corpse of the "Austrian Boy," and had him interred with his father. Perhaps Hitler thus, symbolically, buried himself. Napoleon the second, the "Austrian Boy," in the tomb of the original Napoleon. The first Napoleon and the second—the Austrian—both are interred in France. Hitler is interred in France.

HITLER MADE this strange gesture, all unconsciously no doubt, perhaps because he has a secret which he has not yet shared with the world. Bombs drop on England daily and nightly; the mighty German armies are in occupation of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and France. They prepare vast military, naval and air enterprises at the Channel ports of France and all the North Atlantic states. Hitler—Hitler—Hitler shriek the headlines of the world. He is the greatest success story in history—since Napoleon.

But that strange, mystic, fanatic, superstitious and clairvoyant mind knows what his enemies do not know. Every single one of his major strategies has failed. It has not turned out as he expected it to. Not one single thing has turned out as he planned it. The German army is not beaten, but Hitler is beaten because the German army cannot win for him the victory he planned, the victory on which all his hopes were based. In a furious Samsonesque gesture of pulling down the pillars of the temple of civilization, he may hurl Germany at the cliffs of Dover, and try to reduce the British Isles to a shambles.

BUT STILL he cannot win his war.

If he occupies the whole of the British Isles, he cannot win his war.

For to win his war, he must accomplish his purpose. And Hitler knows now, with clairvoyant certainty, that he cannot accomplish his purpose.

The military tactician knows that disaster is invariable if one tries to change a major strategy in the middle of a campaign. Hitler is no Hindenburg, no Ludendorff, no von Schlieffen. He had, a different tactic from that of these great soldiers. He is Hitler, the revolutionist, whose tactic was war plus revolution, or rather, revolution plus war. The two, in his mind, and in his tactic are indissoluble. The one is a part of the other.

But Hitler has lost the revolution, just as Mussolini has. It is absolutely impossible to establish another real Nazi or Fascist state in Europe. It is impossible to spread a revolution by conquest. And since it is impossible, probably impossible, as I shall try to show in successive columns, Hitler has lost. He still has immense powers of destruction, but he is nevertheless a man without a mission.

For he has not the remotest idea of what to do with his conquests. This is being demonstrated every day in the news that comes to us.

HITLER is the prisoner of his prisoners. Every tactic of Britain and France that has seemed militarily false—their failure to occupy Norway, or Belgium, or Holland, or even Ireland in advance of Hitler—has been psychologically masterful. What restrained both countries was the ethic and logic of their cause. Now because of what seemed military lapses, they have accomplished exactly what Hitler intended to do, and failed to do.

Britain has become the master and flag bearer of the European Revolution.

For this war is a revolutionary war. Hitler knows it. He planned it so. He never counted on winning by war, or by war alone. Hitler's army is just an instrument for the Nazi Revolution. It has now become just an instrument for nothing.

The revolutionary movement in all Europe today, which has mass support, is the revolutionary movement for liberation! Its banner bearer is not Hitler, but Churchill. The only Fifth Columns in occupied countries today are the hundred millions of fanatic patriots praying and working for liberation.

FOR HITLER is not only a bad military strategist—as again I shall show in successive columns—but he has proved himself an even worse revolutionist.

It is doubtful whether his enemies realize it. But he realizes it. For, from the moment when he entered Prague, he started crossing his own strategy.

Pioneering

THIS PLACE was a sort of jook down there, if you remember where you make that square turn to right by the entrance to Key Largo and start down the straight road toward Key West, about 5 or 10 miles down, on the left-hand side, toward the sea. Distance fools you along there, with those green water ditches by the road and the high grass and jungle, but for a long way before you came to this place they had signs stuck up on stakes about their wonderful stone crabs and wonderful turtle steaks and pompano. So we finally came to it, and, like I say, there was this girl, or rather she was a woman about, maybe, 22, in slacks and a kitchen apron, and this little kid was playing all alone in a little clearing, a kid maybe 3 or 4.

She was not bad looking, but kind of sloppy from around the kitchen, and the place where you eat was in a screened place with screen walls but a canvas roof, and these people lived in a little shanty-looking place out back.

So we got talking, like, you know, you get talking with strangers, and it turned out she came from North Dakota, and here it was up around 100 degrees and back where she came from probably 40 below, but she says they can have Florida, but give her where she came from, because she wasn't any Daniel Boone, and pioneering was out of her line.

MOSQUITOES, brother, they eat the meat off your bones in bloody big hunks, and if you get a flat along there at night it was worth your life to stop, because they would be attracted by your lights and your sweat, and sometimes you could see those conks—what they call the natives—working naked to the waist and their hide would be just black with mosquitoes, but the conks they hardly feel it on account of something in their blood. But if you aren't a conk it's murder, where back in Dakota if you kill a mosquito you have it stuffed and put it in a museum, and, furthermore, one night just lately, they had a painter on the roof and it like to scared her crazy.

I never heard anyone call a panther a painter in speaking, although I read where people said like that in books, so I thought for a minute it was a, you know, a house-painter got drunk and went out lally-gagging because, like I say, she was pretty good-looking, although she had her husband there, except he was down the road when we was there, chopping down weeds and cane with a machete and setting out more signs about his wonderful crabs and turtle steak.

She heard this painter screaming and came out and saw the bulge in the canvas where he was sitting on the roof, so she gave him a jab with a mop-handle, and before her husband could get a shot at him he sailed off into the weeds, and you could see his white belly just as pretty in the moonlight, but his claws ripped the canvas like someone cut it with a razor.

SO WE SAID it was a cute little kid, and she said that was another thing why she wanted to quit pioneering, because the week before the husband heard a rattle in the weeds where he was setting out those damn signs and turned around and sloughed a rattlesnake over the head as big as an inner tube with his machete and brought it home at noon and threw it in the yard. Then after lunch he went back to put out more signs, and he said after work he was going to skin it and make a wonderful snakeskin belt or sell it to some tourist, because it was practically enormous and no holes in it like when you shoot them.

So a little later she looked out the kitchen door, and there was the little kid playing around the rattler and trying to pet it, and the snake was coiling up and coming around from the sock on the head with the machete, because it wasn't dead, but only stunned. So she damn near died of fright, but she quick grabbed the old man's automatic off the bureau and ran back and whammed the snake, and she had to take a terrible chance on killing her own kid, but she didn't, and while she was at it she let the snake have five or six more.

And so when the old man came home that night he raised hell for shooting the beautiful snakeskin full of holes—so, brother, she was all caught up on that pioneering stuff, and we didn't blame her, and, moreover, don't ever fall for that turtle steak: it's blue like a football bladder, and you just as soon eat a felt hat.

Negotiated Peace?

By Barnet Nover

Col. Lindbergh's Illusion

WHEN Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee two weeks ago, the following colloquy took place. It is to be found on page 331 in the official transcript of the hearings:

Mr. Johnson (Congressman Luther A. Johnson, of Texas): Which side would it be to our interest to win?

Col. Lindbergh: Neither.

Yesterday, however, at his appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the colonel took a different line. "Here I would like to say," he said, "that I have never taken the stand that it makes no difference to us who wins this war in Europe. It does make a difference to us, a great difference."

NOVER

But he did not pursue the subject. Yet the point of departure in American foreign policy from the moment the war in Europe began was precisely the consideration of the fact stated by Col. Lindbergh, namely, that it makes a very great difference to the United States and the American people instinctively realize that a German victory would endanger our security and imperil our democratic way of life that this Nation's policy has been and will continue to be one of helping Great Britain.

THERE ARE some who contend that a victory for Germany is inevitable, that no matter what the United States may do Great Britain is doomed. That was the theme song of Hitler's Sportspalast speech on January 30. That was the burden of Col. Lindbergh's testimony before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House on January 23 and of his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday. It is not Britain's view. It does not appear to be the view of the still surviving independent nations on the periphery of the conflict who, despite prolonged pressure by Hitler, have refused to become adherents of the "new order" in Europe. It is not the view of the great majority of Americans.

YESTERDAY, as two weeks ago, Col. Lindbergh advocated a negotiated peace. On neither occasion did he explain what he meant by it or how it could be brought about. The method was repeatedly tried in the years between 1933 and 1939. It was tried by Poland when that nation concluded a ten-year non-aggression pact with the Third Reich; by Great Britain in her ill-fated naval agreement with Germany; by Austria in 1936; by Great Britain and France at Munich in the fall of 1938; by defeated France last June.

Even while Col. Lindbergh was testifying, Germany was continuing her unrelenting pressure on the Vichy government to abandon the little that is left of its independence and become the tool of Hitler's war machine. The kind of peace that could be made with Hitler is hardly the kind of peace that Great Britain should be asked to accept. It would be the prelude to capitulation if not a capitulation at once.

ACTUALLY, Col. Lindbergh can be convicted from his own mouth of being disingenuous in his advocacy of a negotiated peace. He may believe it would be wise, if possible. He does not believe it is possible. For it is his contention that neither Great Britain alone nor Great Britain with the aid of the United States can defeat Germany. He said that repeatedly in his testimony before the House committee. He said it again yesterday. Two weeks ago, when asked by Congressman Shanley: "You do not think anything short of war will win the war for the British?" he replied: "I do not think anything short of war or beyond war will win the war for their present purposes." And yesterday he declared that "An English victory, if it were possible at all, would necessitate years of war and an invasion of the continent of Europe . . . Personally, I do not believe that England is in a position to win the war."

Now if it is true that Great Britain, without our aid or even with it, cannot win, what particular reason would Hitler have for negotiating a peace with that nation that is not a peace of complete capitulation? The answer is, none whatever. And a peace of capitulation, as we are discovering from what is happening at Vichy, means pressure on the vanquished to serve as the ally for further conquests by the victor. A Britain which has made peace with Hitler on Hitler's terms would, in other words, be a Britain allied to Hitler and prepared to do his bidding.

What Col. Lindbergh apparently wants is for the United States to put pressure on Great Britain to capitulate. That would mean, Col. Lindbergh seems to believe, the restoration of peace in Europe. Col. Lindbergh is more sanguine in this regard than the overwhelming majority of his fellow countrymen. He is more sanguine than anything in Hitler's record gives one a right to be.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Luke and Elmer

Luke—Well, I wish I was as sure as you are about all Americans bein' hot for the all-out aid program.

Elmer—I hope the President, the other leaders and all these Gallup Polls are right, but I still have my doubts, heaven forgive me!

Luke—Everything I read says the country to the last man is 100 per cent for the program, come what may. The papers is full of headlines like "Americans Ready to Go Limit" an' "People Behind Program," but all I know is what I hear an' see, an' it don't make me feel any too good.

Elmer—What's bothering you?

Luke—This whole question of bein' ready to leap into the thick of the biggest war in history. From just watchin' the parade go by, I only get a picture of a Nation that looks silly, pleasure-lovin', spotlight-worshippin' an' a little dumb. What I mean, the rank an' file don't look heroic to me.

Elmer—You can't judge a people by mere surface appearances.

Luke—I hope not. If so, we're sunk. Lookin' at the American people in the mass, I wouldn't think they would want any part of a war unless it would move over if they blew a horn.

Elmer—Maybe you've just been with the wrong people, brother.

Luke—Maybe so. But I still get nuthin' but a picture of a rank an' file that thinks nuthin' much matters in life except a steady diet of exhibitionism, self-glorification, Hollywood personal notes, an' autographs from the wrong people.

Elmer—You ain't hinting that our standards are gone, are you?

Luke—Personally maybe I wouldn't know a standard from a ham on rye, but I still get the uncomfortable feelin' that at the moment America in the mass ain't in the mood for war. All I see is everybody shovin' everybody else aroun', tootin' old women to get outta the way an' goin' ga-ga every time a camera shows up anywhere.

Elmer—If war comes it will be a different picture, don't worry.

Luke—I can't help worryin'. I'm a natural born worrier. I fret with no effort. Who gets all the loud applause, who gets his picture plastered all over the place, who is guy No. 1 in this country today, the fellow who invents a serum to save lives or some half-witted movie queen who has just taken her fifth husband? Who is stormed by the cameramen, the guy who gives up a good job to enlist or the drunk who stands on his noggin in night clubs?

Elmer—You are familiar with only a particularly smelly segment of life, I am afraid.

Luke—I hope you're 100 per cent correct. But I don't see no difference, even when I move around in the sticks an' take a peek at upper an' lower levels. I don't hear many people even talkin' about their personal yen to aid England or their personal sense of duty. They are all talkin' about the latest Hollywood scandal, a new system for hitch-hikin', a good thing in the third at Havana or a cocktail that does the work of five straight goblets of raw alcohol.

Elmer—You've been spending too much time under wet planks.

Luke—Okay. But does the picture look much different to you up there on the nice dry mezzanine?

Elmer—No. But we ain't at war. If we get into it you'll never recognize us.

Luke—I hope not!

"Do you remember," asks Martin Ragway, "when a million dollars seemed like a lot of money?"

It would be funny if Hitler finally finds out from the American eagle what it means to get the bird.

Ima Dodo says that "Gone With the Wind" at 35 cents is almost as good as when it was being shown for $2.

From the sound of the names of those cities and towns taken in Africa this looks more and more like a war to make the world unsafe for proofreaders.

La Follette Testimony

By Ernest Lindley

How To Prevent An Anglo-German Pact

MOST OF THE arguments for and against the lend-lease bill have now been thoroughly aired, but Phil La Follette has contrived a new one. He fears that if we strengthen the British they will make an agreement with the Nazis on terms inimical to our interests.

LINDLEY

La Follette reminded the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that in February, 1939, leaders of British and German industry entered into a trade pact which pledged collaboration against the United States. This, he recalls, was six years after the Nazis had come into power and shocked the world with their persecution of minorities.

He believes that there remain in England influential people who feel closer to Nazi-ruled Germany than to us. He fears that if we improve the bargaining power of the British, these elements will reach a "Hoare-Laval" agreement with Hitler and leave us alone to fight the whole world.

The trade pact to which Phil La Follette referred was made during the period of appeasement. It was almost the last act of that period. The very next month the Nazis marched into Bohemia-Moravia, violating the terms of the Munich agreement of the preceding autumn and wrecking the policy of appeasement. The Chamberlain government hastily guaranteed the independence of Poland and Rumania and entered into alliance with Turkey. It was this government, manned by the Tory "appeasers," which took Great Britain to war when Germany invaded Poland.

PROBABLY there remain in England some people who are not hostile to the Nazi scheme of things. We have a few of them here. But there must be a larger number who, as a practical matter, doubt that Great Britain can carry this war to a successful conclusion. To some the choice must seem to be between the destruction of Great Britain and the loss of the empire, on one side, and peace or a truce of some kind with Hitler.

Almost certainly the talk in this country of a "negotiated peace" is inspired in part by backstage appeasement elements in Great Britain.

If the German all-out attack on the British Isles is launched this spring with the ferocity which some of our military experts expect, British sentiment in favor of an armistice almost certainly will sharply increase.

The understanding which Phil La Follette cites as an example of the sort of Anglo-German cooperation that we should fear was worked out when the British had something approaching equality of bargaining power. The French and Polish armies were intact. The Germans and the Russians had not come to terms. Hitler held only Austria and the rim of Czecho-Slovakia. The parties to the understanding were businessmen, and it did not involve or imply the use of armed force.

Any understanding between Germany and Great Britain now or in the near future would be on German terms. The most that the British could expect would be a junior partnership. The senior partner, with the power to destroy the junior partner if he did not cooperate, would be a military power controlling most of the resources of Europe and having as its avowed aim the domination of the world.

An agreement between some German and British industrialists to do us out of a few million dollars worth of export trade in South and Central America was something to be feared, in La Follette's mind. But, singularly, he seems to have no fear of an agreement which would leave the Nazis undisputed masters of Europe, open to them all the resources of Africa and make the British Navy their auxiliary.

WITHOUT A FLOW of munitions from us, the British cannot continue to fight. They must either surrender or come to terms with Hitler. Without assurance of our aid, on a rising scale, their bargaining position would be so weak that they must become a partner of the Nazis. The last hope of liberation among the conquered peoples of Europe would vanish, and with it the last reason for resisting the Nazi "new order."

The more we strengthen the British, the less is the probability of a peace or armistice inimical to our interests and security.

The present British government is pledged to prosecution of the war until the Nazi regime has been destroyed. If they have the will to fight on, it is certainly to our interest to supply them with the weapons with which to do the fighting. The surest way to keep in power British leaders of that determination is to go the limit in the provision of munitions.

What Phil La Follette fears if we aid the British is almost certain to happen—only a hundredfold worse—if we don't.

Arms Program in 2d Phase, Biggers Tells 300 Educators

John D. Biggers, production manager of the Office of Production Management, declared last night that "we have completed the blueprints and ordered the tools for defense, but that "we must rack our brains and use all our energies to put the blueprints into effect."

Speaking to a national conference of Defense Committees of Colleges and Universities at the Mayflower Hotel, the OPM official stressed the importance of a rapid "tooling up" of American industry for arms production.

Biggers told 300 educators that "the first impetus of defense" had sent orders to powerful companies used for many years by the Army and Navy.

Second Phase of Defense

"Now, however, we're doing our utmost to spread the load, to use all the small shops and the idle machines, and unemployed manpower . . . This is the important part of the second phase of defense."

The Administration spokesman concluded: "If we spread the load wisely, with all of us cooperating together to the end of maintaining normal production we may absorb into industry" many of the Nation's unemployed, and "perhaps we can build a better political and social system than we ever had before."

Earlier, President Isaiah Bowman of Johns Hopkins University, told the educators that Selective Service officials should defer from training students in specialized courses who would be more valuable to national defense pursuing their professions.

Technicians Needed, Too

"We will be headed for disaster," Bowman asserted, "if we keep our eyes solely on making a man into a soldier. There must be cooperation between the Federal Government and our educational institutions to turn out also the doctors and engineers and technical experts who can make efforts of the fighting men effective."

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, warned the delegates that injury would result to the draft if all of one class, such as college students were deferred.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, praised colleges and universities for curricular programs, which, had been made adaptable to national defense.

Nearly 400,000 young people had been trained in schools and colleges in the last nine months, 10 times the figure during the World War, he declared.

The administrator also asserted the institutions of higher learning would be called upon to give ground training to 25,000 prospective Army fliers in new intensive three-month courses now being charted.

President, Knox Join in Effort To Aid Hurt Sailor

President Roosevelt's personal physician and Secretary Knox's personal plane have cooperated in an effort to save the eyesight of an injured Navy seaman.

Leonard H. Yates, seaman, second class, was struck by the propeller of a plane on the aircraft carrier Wasp, operating in the South Atlantic. Treated for a fractured skull and severe face lacerations, it appeared he might lose his eyesight.

Arrangements were made for the sailor to be flown to Miami where Secretary Knox's plane picked him up. Rushed to the Naval Hospital here, Rear Admiral R. T. McIntire, Navy Surgeon General and the President's doctor, was consulted on his condition. Last night, it was uncertain whether his sight could be saved, but his general condition was declared to be excellent.

More Funds Urged For D. C. Schools

The Midway Civic Association last night went on record urging a deficiency appropriation be added to the allotment for the support of District public schools in a meeting at Morgan School.

The unit voted to appoint a committee to study the 1942 budget for schools in divisions 10 to 13, emphasizing there are 99 teachers less than are needed in these institutions.

Steel Man Denies Kemper Speaks For U. S. Business

Clarence Randall, vice president of Inland Steel Corporation, declared yesterday that James S. Kemper, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, cannot speak for "business" in opposing the British aid bill in Congress.

He said in a statement he was sure "there are thousands of business executives throughout the country who support the United States Chamber of Commerce but who believe very earnestly, as I do, that this bill should pass."

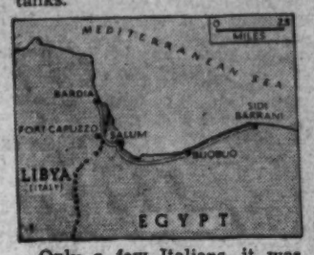
THE PRISONERS AND THEIR CAPTORS—Italians (above) stream out of captured Bardia, marching toward an Egyptian base from which they were transported to prison camps. On the double, three British soldiers (right) advance with fixed bayonets through a street in the deserted Italian stronghold. It was reported that prisoners captured exceeded 25,000

Capture of Bardia . . .

One of the most disastrous routs in military history was claimed by the British on January 5, when the Union Jack was hoisted above the government house in Bardia.

Marshal Graziani's Italian army of invasion, which in September, 1940, struck 75 miles across Egypt to Sidi Barrani, was completely shattered with the capture of Il Duce's stronghold in Libya.

After 20 days of relentless siege, Bardia fell in shambles, British troops stormed into the bomb-torn and fire-drenched town with the "Aussies" leading them behind swift moving tanks.



Only a few Italians, it was reported, escaped death or capture in the taking of Bardia, and the amount of war loot was called enormous.

Odd Jobs

A Good Man Not to Meet Professionally

Roger E. Frye, the District's young morgue-master, has a job that's good for that tired feeling.

He works just beneath a plaster cast of an unidentified murdered woman.

And around the corner from his office is the well-known marble slab on which virtually all the city's suicide and murder victims are examined.

Within the last two years he has conducted from 200 to 300 autopsies on suspicious deaths.

With all of these gruesome surroundings and duties, Frye three years ago had never seen a dead person and furthermore had no desire ever to see one. His first corpse, he says, gave him a sort of sinking sensation. But now he treats accident fatalities, suicides and homicides without a quiver.

He works in the new District morgue, the ultra-modern, two-story, glareless tile structure at Nineteenth and I Streets Southeast, with the District coroner, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald.

ROGER E. FRYE
Records Testimony on a Stenotype Machine

Frye's one bad moment since joining the morgue staff in 1938 occurred two years ago, when a woman who had taken poison was brought to the morgue. As he prepared to conduct an autopsy, the apparently dead woman moved. She was revived by the rescue Squad, but later died. Frye did not conduct the autopsy.

A native of Pinehurst, N. C., the morgue-master first worked in the District morgue —then located in a small and dingy building on the waterfront—as a shorthand reporter in the coroner's office.

There he learned the art of making autopsies and reported hearings and inquests. Since moving to the new morgue building a year ago, Frye estimates he has handled records on more than 3,000 District deaths and viewed an average of six corpses daily in the morgue's stainless steel "icebox."

One of his duties since last summer has been to try to establish identity of a dark-skinned woman whose multilated corpse was discovered in a trunk in Union Station. He estimates that between 5,000 and 6,000 persons have viewed the plaster cast of the murdered woman, but her identity is still a mystery.

President Appoints Winant Ambassador to England

T. Johnson, who has been envoy to China since 1929, to become Minister to Australia.

Though the shift means a step-down in rank for Johnson from Ambassador to Minister, the White House explained that the change was really a reward to Johnson because, it was said, the Government realized the hectic life he had been living under wartime conditions in China and wanted to give him an opportunity to find some rest and peace with his family.

Clarence E. Gauss, hard-driving former Consul General in China, who is now serving as Minister to Australia, was named to take Johnson's place at the Chungking Embassy.

The President also nominated Jay Pierrepont Moffat, now Minister to Canada, to serve also, but without additional compensation, as Minister near the government of Luxembourg. The tiny duchy now maintains its headquarters in Canada.

Dawson Shifted

The President also sent to the Senate these other nominations:

William Dawson, of Minnesota, now serving at Ambassador to Panama, to become Ambassador to Uruguay. Our Legation there is being raised to an Embassy.

Edwin C. Wilson, of Florida, now Minister to Uruguay, to become Ambassador to Panama.

Alexander C. Kirk, of Illinois,

JOHNSON

GAUSS

now Counselor of Embassy at Rome, to become Minister to Egypt.

Herbert Claiborne Pell, of Rhode Island, now Minister to Portugal, to become Minister to Hungary.

Cast in the quiet, reserved mold of his New England forbears, Winant is sometimes said to be a latter-day aristocratic Abraham Lincoln.

Both his interests and his physical characteristics give some basis for the comparison.

Former School Teacher

His life's story is compounded of contrasts.

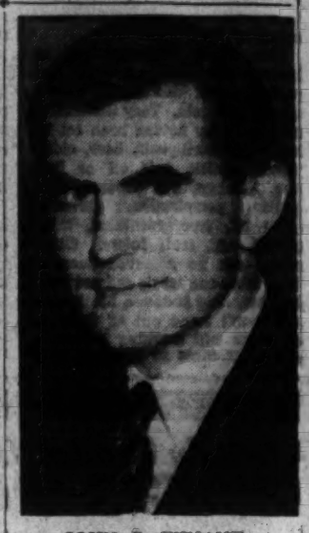
For instance, he is one former school teacher who defied the tradition and proved he could make a comfortable fortune in other lines.

He is a rich man who has devoted the better part of a quarter century to public affairs, and who has taken a lifelong and practical interest in labor's interest.

Further, he is a New Englander who has cast off the traditional provincialism of that section to direct two far-flung projects, the League of Nations' Labor Division, and the Social Security program.

Now 51 years old, Winant was born in 1889 in New York City, the son of a real estate man who soon afterward moved to Concord, N. H.

He served in the Air Corps during the World War, enlisting as a private and emerging a captain. Then he went to exclusive St. Paul's School in Concord as assistant principal, and was a member of the Legislature three terms, divided between the Senate and House. In 1919 he married Miss Constance Rivington Russell. They have three children.



JOHN G. WINANT

In 1925 Winant was elected Governor of New Hampshire for a two-year term, and in 1931 was elected again and served for two terms, through 1935, giving the State a "little New Deal."

Winant was called to Washington first in 1934 to settle a textile industry wage dispute, and his next assignment from the White House was to head the first Social Security Administration, a post in which he served two years before going to Geneva as assistant director of the International Labor Office. Later he became director of that international bureau.

Biddle, appointed envoy to four refugee governments, is the first American diplomat ever to be accredited to so many nations, the White House said.

Biddle will succeed John Cudahy as Ambassador to Belgium, Mrs. Florence Harriman as Minister to Norway and George A. Gordon as Minister to The Netherlands. Cudahy and Mrs. Harriman have resigned, while Gordon, a career diplomat, is assigned to the State Department.

Citrus Fruits Aid Defense Of Health

By Martha Ellyn

HOW'S your personal health defense program—or don't you have one?

Headlines today are full of national defense measures, not the least of which is health defense. Whether you are in military or civilian life, physical well-being is equally important. Adoption of a national health defense program by the Government renews recognition of vitamins as vital ammunition in the battle of self-preservation.

Martha Ellyn

Food fads or minimum diets which lead to malnutrition are definitely out. The best precaution against infection is a varied and balanced food selection, with accent on the protective foods—those containing vitamins A, B, and C and the mineral, calcium. Of all the thirty-odd food essentials needed by the body, these four are termed "protective" because they are the one most often slighted in the average died.

In the United States which has everything in the kind of food, it is easy and pleasant to eat for health. Natural foods, which collectively contain all vital elements, are abundant. Even when winter comes there are still plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables in the United States, which has producing areas such as California to contribute green vegetables and golden fruits around the calendar.

In the winter months many persons neglect to use the available fresh foods. Yet they are needed for their protective qualities. Valued vitamins may be lost in cooking—that is why it is so important to eat some raw vegetables and fruits and to drink plenty of fresh fruit juice.

Citrus Fruits Are Defense Against Colds

Citrus fruits, recognized as the primary source of vitamin C, become shock troops for health defense as cold weather cuts down the variety of fresh foods. A large glass of fresh orange juice is not only a delicious breakfast drink, it is also excellent health insurance. It contributes the elusive vitamin C and vitamins, A, B1 and G, and calcium, phosphorous and iron as well. How could any chemist's art improve on this natural way of acquiring what it takes for normal growth and development, particularly of bones and teeth and to keep the general health level above the reach of infection?

Deep golden orange juice is a good source of vitamin A. And the richer the color, the richer the juice. That is one reason that California orange juice can be depended upon to average the highest concentration of protective essentials. There are many ways of incorporating oranges into the family menus. Here are some excellent recipes that originated in the Sunkist Kitchen in California.

The old favorite, Waldorf Salad, retains its familiarity and gains new flavor with the addition of juicy orange sections. Here is the recipe:

Orange Waldorf Salad

Prepare 3 cups unpeeled, red-skinned, sliced apples. Sprinkle the apples with 2 tablespoons lemon juice and a litle sugar. Combine with 2 cups orange sections, ¾ cup diced celery, 1-3 cup chopped walnut meats and ¾ cup lemon mayonnaise. Serves 6 to 8.

Baked Alaska is a dessert that brings cheers from most anyone. It can be presented in an attractive form if made in orange cups. Use the following recipe:

Baked Orange Alaska

Cut off the tops of 8 oranges. Carefully remove sections and mix with 2 tablespoons grenadine sirup. Refill the orange cups with sections and chill thoroughly. Top with vanilla ice cream. (Use 1 quart for the 8 cups.) Cover the ice cream (to the very edge of the orange shells) with heavy meringue. Make the meringue by beating 2 egg whites until frothy; then adding ½ cup sugar gradually while beating until mixture holds peak. Cover bottom of shallow pan with several layers of heavy wrapping paper. Place orange cups in pan and bake in very hot oven, 500 degrees, for a few minutes, not more than 5. Serve immediately. Serves 8.

A sweet potato casserole is a novel dish when accented with sliced oranges. The recipe for making it follows:

Sweet Potato and Orange Casserole

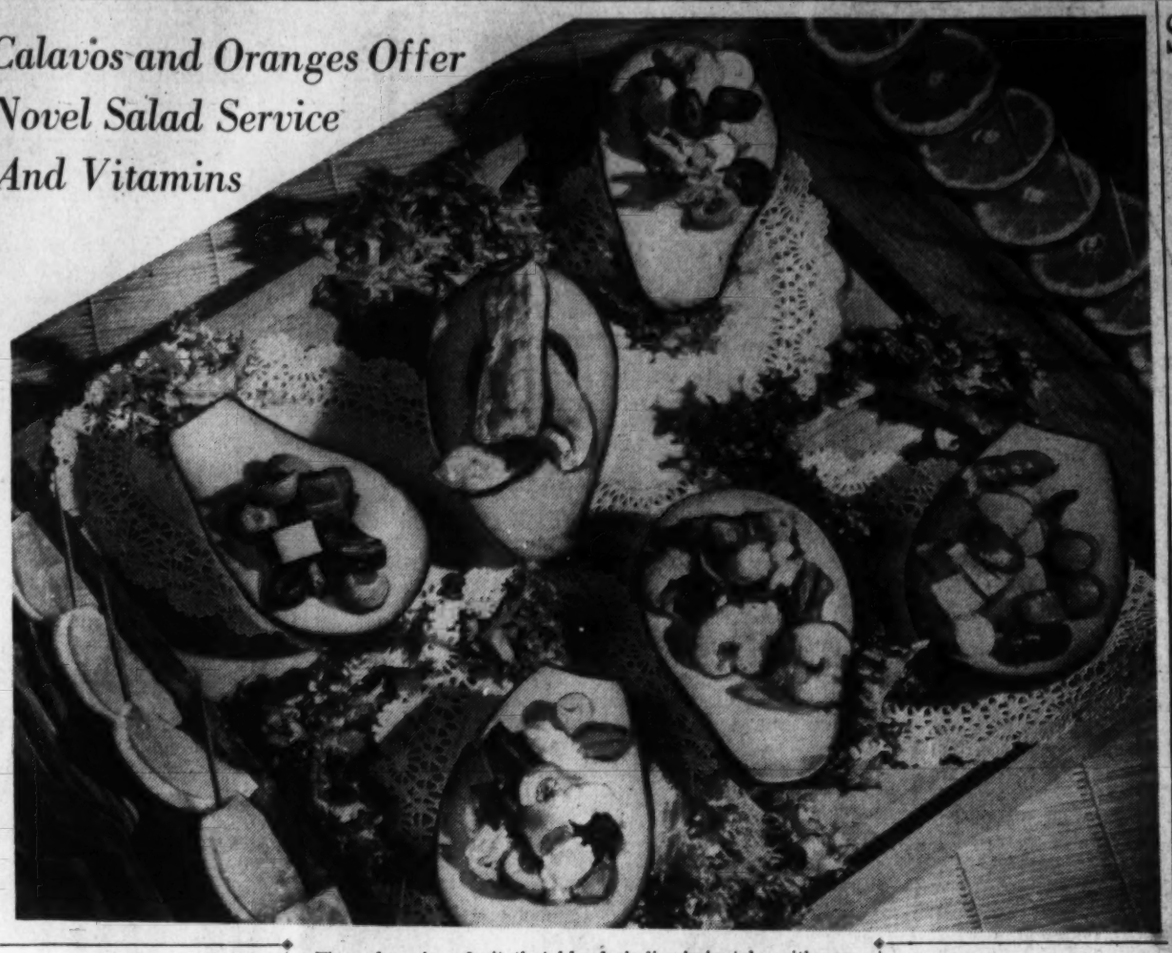
Wash 5 medium-sized sweet potatoes (2 pounds approximately), and boil until almost tender—about 25 minutes. Peel and cut the potatoes into 1-3 inch slices. Season with ½ teaspoon salt. Slice 2 whole oranges, peel and all, thinly. Place alternate layers of potatoes and orange slices in a buttered casserole. Combine ½ cup strained honey, ⅓ cup orange juice with 4 tablespoons fine bread crums and 4 tablespoons butter and pour over the potatoes and oranges. Bake for 1 hour at 350 degrees.

A perfect luncheon entree is a Stuffed Calavo Salad. Serve with hot muffins and a hot beverage and little else is needed. The hot muffins can be made with fortified flour and there will be added assurance that the necessary vitamin B1 is going to be included in the diet. Make the salad this way:

Stuffed Calavo Salad

To prepare Calavo halves, cut the fruit into halves lengthwise. Remove seeds and pull off skin. Hollow out the stem ends slightly. Sprinkle inside and out with lemon juice and salt. Combine three 3-ounce packages of cream cheese with 2 canned pimientos cut in small pieces, salt to taste and a few drops of Tabasco sauce, and blend thoroughly. Fill the Calavo halves with the cheese mixture and press two filled halves together. Wrap in wax paper and chill. Do not place in freezing unit. Cut into the lengthwise slices and serve on lettuce garnished salad plates. Top with mayonnaise if desired. Serves 8.

Calavos and Oranges Offer Novel Salad Service And Vitamins



The calavo is a fruit that blends indiscriminately with sea, food, vegetables and fruits. Above is shown a buffet tray that exemplifies attractively the use of this fruit. Shrimp in jellied consomme, crab meat, ripe or green olive rings, pickled beets, celery, onion or combination fruit salad, all blend equally and delightfully to supply unusually appetizing variety. The salad dressing should be suited to the contents

Orange cups make an attractive twosome in the picture above. One shell is filled with Orange Ham Salad and the other with Orange Fruit Salad. Served with sandwiches, crisp hearts of lettuce and a glass of milk, this plate makes a complete luncheon

Ginger Ale Addition Peps Up Salad

Cranberry salad is a novelty that is e pecially appropriate at the holiday season. Try making it with ginger ale. Follow these directions:

Cranberry Salad—Dissolve 1 package gelatine and 1/3 cup sugar in 1 cup strained unsweetened cranberry sauce. When cool add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup ginger ale and 1 cup crushed pineapple. When slightly congealed stir in 1 cup chopped celery and nut meats. Turn into molds until firm. Unmold on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise, to which a teaspoon of horseradish may be added for piquancy.

Spots Will Come Out If Treated Properly

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

AS LADY MacBeth discovered, we can't just mutter at an accursed spot and expect it to vanish. For removing spots is a pretty precise science, requiring lots of skill and chemistry than we generally give our cleaner credit for.

The real irony of spilling something on a favorite fabric is that our own efforts to take out the stain often set it in permanently. So beware what you do to a spot. If you can't resist dabbing at it, use cold water and soap suds—that could rarely do any harm and may help. Or else try a good dry cleaning fluid. But never use hot water and never never use an iron till the stain is really out, for many stains, which could otherwise be removed, are made permanent by heat.

The stains that are set in irrevocably by heat are tea and coffee, peach and cherry juice, ginger ale, cola. Very difficult to remove, after having been set by heat, are astringents, beer, cider, wine, lipstick, hair oil or hair dye, ketchup, ink, tobacco, shoe polish, perspiration, perfume, olive oil, mercurochrome, milk, caviar, egg, fruit juices. Other stains can be removed successfully from one fabric and not from another. For instance, black walnut won't come out of wool or silk, nor will marking ink come out of celanese or silk nor will nail polish remover come out of celanese. Reasonably easy to remove by dry cleaning are such stains as candle wax, varnish and paint, tar, grease.

The safest course to follow, if the material stained is something you greatly treasure, is to send it to a reliable dry cleaner. If the stain is removable, he'll have the right chemical to do it, besides knowing how to test those mysterious stains that you can't identify. And don't limit dry cleaning to garments—remember that rugs, upholsteries and draperies are kept in the best condition by this method also and that, in the long run, it will prove an economy to give good possessions this sort of care.

Cook's Library

By MARTHA ELLYN

"ENTERTAINING IS FUN," written by Dorothy Draper, society matron turned business woman, is a book that gives a refreshing approach to home entertaining. In the opinion of Mrs. Draper, all one needs to make entertaining really fun is a "flair for enjoyment." She writes in her book that there are five ingredients needed for a successful party. They are:

1. A hostess who expects to have a good time.
2. Some clever touches which give your home a party feeling.
3. Friendly guests who come prepared to enjoy themselves.
4. Plenty of delicious food, attractively presented.
5. Some element of unexpectedness.

Mrs. Draper's book is neither a cookbook nor a book of etiquette, but a vivacious, inspiring book on home entertaining, telling that if you apply a little common sense and flair to the problem of giving a dinner party, it is not a difficult task.

When giving a dinner party the author advises, "first see that the table itself is attractive. Create an effective and original centerpiece, see that every bit of silver and glassware gleams brilliantly, be conscious of color always. Seat the guests with an eye to keeping conversation alive and don't saddle yourself with bore number one. You can't be a good hostess if you do."

Concerning food Mrs. Draper says, "Remember that giving a dinner party isn't the effortful thing it used to be long before we began to count calories. Today five courses—soup, fish, meat with vegetables, salad and dessert—are considered a lengthy menu and four are preferable. Each dish should be perfect of its kind. And it should be presented attractively."

The publishers are, Doubleday, Doran & Co. The price is $2.79.

The Gentler Sex

A Little Touch of White

YOU are sick of your dull drab self in the mirror, so you'll just run downtown and get some kind of a little white collar to liven up your old black crepe. A crisp little lingerie touch will enable you to wear the dress well into spring—that's one great value of a basic dress—and it will really do a lot for your face. Besides . . . men always respond to those little feminine touches.

The neckwear counters are spread with a foam of lace and organdie. Myriads of enchanting "sets" at slightly higher prices fill the glass cases. How will you ever be able to choose from such a beguilding array?

You explain to the saleswoman that you want a medium-sized, round, white collar, something chic and dainty to give a lift to the black dress you are wearing . . . She immediately brings out a large handsome and overpowering set of white revers. No, that will scarcely do—since the neckline of your dress is round.

She produces a huge, round ruffled organdie effect . . . No, that is too elaborate . . . But "they" are wearing a lot of ruffles this spring, she protests . . . No, you will have no ruffles! They always make you look like a country belle.

She shows you a large bib of lace and insertion? You try it on. The black of your dress shows above it at the neck . . . She rummages in half a dozen drawers which seem to hold all the collars in the world and returns with a lace-frilled vestee with neat little bow in front. No, that won't do either. Your dress zips up the back . . . She rummages again, returns with a huge Peter Pan effect . . . No, that makes you look as if you were trying to impersonate a subdeb at a costume party, party.

Maybe you'd like some of the colored organdies? Colored neckwear is very "good" this spring. You try a blue frilly one. Both dress and collar react violently against each other. You try a pink one. The fight becomes more violent.

You give up in despair, try another shop. More billows of lace and organdie . . . more innumerable "sets" in cases and drawers.

You try on large bibs, small bibs and medium-sized bibs, none of which conform to the neckline of your dress. You try on tailored revers, pleated frills. All set coldly aloof from your dress—and from you. The saleswoman rummages in countless drawers, confers with other saleswomen, brings out armloads of lace and organdie. Collars, collars everywhere—and not one for you!

You go from 98 cents to $1.50. You advance to the $1.98 stock, then get reckless and try on the $2.95 models. Finally you succumb to a $3.95 foamy creation. But no, it will have none of you—or you of it.

You go to other stores, try on the neckwear in legions of other cases and drawers. You advance to the $4.95 creations and finally in desperation try on a neat collar with embroidery and cut work, priced at $5.95.

Still your black basic dress remains stubbornly unfriendly to all the gay little touches of spring. It is an old tweed dress, it seems to say. It will have none of these young and airy nothings.

After all, perhaps December and May cannot mate in clothes and maybe . . . if you are going to spend as much as $5.95 . . . why you might as well . . .

Why that's it exactly! You'll just spend a little more and get a brand new spring dress!

Simple Designs Aid Dressmaker This Season

Attractive to look at and easy to make! The two-piece long-torso frock is in tune with the spring trends with it undefined waistline and smooth hips. Make it in two shades of faille, for dress, or in sheer wool for first coatless days. The plain neck and shoulder line leaves space for a Hawaiian lei at the neck or the military insignia of the man in your lige

"Make your own dress"—that is the solution to many a woman's spring wardrobe, whether the problem is one of clothes that will not wreck a meager family budget, or a question of not being able to find just what you want in the shops.

Even if you sew for the sheer love of sewing, this is the season for it. There is a basic simplicity and an easy-to-make touch about patterns influenced by the Americana trend. Whether you make a simple black frock and wear the emblem of your favorite aviator, or go in for stars and stripes, you'll liven the dress with some symbol of your country.

The middy blouse, a favorite of childhood stages, is the most versatile fashion of the season. It can be a simple one-piece version with contrasting collar, or a long torso dress that looks like a two-piece frock. Middies also accompany sailor suit slacks and play suits.

For details that give a "store bought" appearance to a dress, add stitching, embroidered emblems, gold officer's braid and ruffles at the neckline. Whatever your preference—the severity of military smartness, or the softness of line that brings out your most feminine feeling—spring clothes are yours for the making.

Modern Opera Stars Famous For Figures as Well as Voices

By Ida Jean Kain

IN THE old days of the Diamond Horseshoe, slimness among opera stars was so exceptional that it was almost taken for granted the golden voice needed the lush bolstering of excessive weight.

But the old order has changed. Nowadays, singing stars are watching the weight scales as closely as the glamour girls of the movies. It would take Lily Pons and Gladys Swarthout together to bring the scales up to the impressive figure at which the famous Tetrazzini regularly weighed in.

There are not very many like Nordica, Gadski, Matzenauer, Fremstad, Emmy Destinn, and Schumann-Heinck. True, some of the older stars today are still more portly than plump—but that is not what would be called the trend.

The lovely Grace Moore shows what an opera star—or any other woman—can do with her looks via the weight scales. Those who knew her 'when," say she was no glamour girl until she became weight conscious. After she became ambitious for a screen career, she not only slimmed down from a mature figure to schoolgirl proportions but even acquired the fascinating cheek hollows demanded of movie sirens.

New High in Glamour

Most of the singers, however, are as noted for their streamlined figures as for their voices. Jarmila Novotna, the Czech soprano, sets a new high in glamour for the Met—she is tall, slender, beautifully proportioned.

The blonde and lovely Hilda Burke thinks it impossible to keep in form without forty-five minutes of daily exercise which includes rope skipping, kicking, and other vigorous tests of endurance. She also keeps a strict eye on the calories—and regards soda fountain concoctions as the main downfall of the faminine figure.

Gladys Swarthout, twice nominated as one of America's best dressed, proved the theory that being well-dressed depends on having a good figure. She is 5 feet 3½ inches tall, and weighs 125 pounds—all streamlined. Her formula for beauty consists in standing on her head several times a day, doing a wall-walking exercise, and exercising daily with a rowing machine.

Exercise and Relaxation

Jean Dickenson, youngest—and some say the prettiest—of the Met stars, favors an outdoor beauty routine of swimming in the salt water and relaxing on a sand beach. But for dreary winter days she has a compact set of calisthenics which keep her in trim. As a result her proportions are: Bust, 34½ inches; waist, 24½ inches; hips, 35 inches. Those measurements are as svelte as a movie star's!

But of all the streamlined opera stars it is probably Lily Pons who gives the "established customers" the greatest shock for their money. After having become accustomed to the over-upholstered favorites of the bygone days, it must be almost impossible to reconcile that lavishly liquid voice with the fragilely slim Pons' figure.

'What Is the Rule for Kissing?' Asks Girl of 21, Who Wonders 'How Much Display of Affection' She May Permit, Without Losing Man's Respect

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is the rule for kissing? In just what light does a young man regard the girl who allows him to kiss her? How much display of affection can she permit, and still inspire his love or liking (as the case may be), and retain his respect for her?

I have talked with a girl friend on the subject and she seems to feel that when a girl and man have become well acquainted and really like each other (not necessarily being in love), it is permissible for them to exchange a "good night" kiss. In fact, she said her dearest man friend had told her such a kiss made him like her all the more,—and that his actions had never given her any reason to doubt this.

However, an older woman of my acquaintance contends that it is wrong for a girl to permit any kissing until she is engaged to be married,—and that even then the young man should kiss her only on the cheek, and their engagement should be as short as possible. I can see the wisdom of such an arrangement for young persons lacking discretion. This older woman furtner says there is no essential difference in intent, but only in degree, between the first kiss and the most advanced stages of lovemaking,—and therefore there should be very little (and preferably no) kissing before marriage. In conclusion, she said any girl who lets a man kiss her before he declares his love for her, will immediately lose his respect and trust.

I have also discussed my questions with a young man. He answered that if he liked a girl well enough to want to kiss her goodnight, and she consented, he certainly didn't respect her any the less. As for myself, I want to do the right and proper thing in my relations with young men. I want their respect, without having to be a prude. Therefore, I would like to have your instructions,—as well as any enlightening comment your readers may have to offer. Sincerely,

TWENTY ONE.

Girl's Attitude Keys Man's Reaction

DEAR TWENTY ONE: To kiss or not to kiss is a subject which has been thoroughly discussed from time to time in this column over a period of years,—and I could wish that some of these earlier discussions had come to your attention and resolve your perplexity. However, for your information, I shall once more bring the subject up-to-date.

There is no set "rule for kissing." Whether or not a man "retains his respect" for a girl after kissing her depends, primarily, upon the quality of his thought, feeling and understanding; and, secondarily, upon the attitude which the girl herself brings to the exchange. Or perhaps that order would be reversed in some instances: A man might undertake, light mindedly, to kiss a girl in a mood of experimental deviltry,—and discover in her response such innocence, sweetness and delicacy of feeling as to be inexplicably chastened, sobered, instructed and even exalted by the incident.

The "older woman's views" which you have quoted represent, in my opinion, a definitely prurient attitude (on the part of a person of mature experience) toward the phenomena of sentiment, romance, love, affection, courtship, etc. So fearsome a retreat from the biological implications of mankind's and womankind's affinity for each other suggests that the lady believes all attractive girls and personable men are completely at the mercy of their emotions; that moral and spiritual deterrents and conscious, rational control are unknown to them; that a kiss or tender embrace is an irresistible invitation to "that old dabbil Sex" to take charge of the picture. Most of us know, from our own experience, that such is not the case.

Your girl friend's views, as well as those of the young man you consulted, make pretty good, "middle-of-the-road" sense. Evidently, a kiss to them is an expression of affection; an avowal of harmonious understanding and mutual esteem that they see fit to proclaim in this immemorial and long-since conventional form. To them, there is no direct relationship between a kiss and "the most advanced stages of lovemaking,"—and that is just as it should be. The spring of the year is not midsummer or autumn,—and neither should an adolescent's vague yearnings toward romance and sentimental companionship be confused with the impulses of mature, experienced, emotional awareness.

Your relations with men will always be on a "right and proper" plane, without taint of prudishness, if you treat them in a manner which conveys your belief in, and consideration for, their "fineness" of feeling.

In other words, treat them, one and all, as if they were gentlemen of honorable intent; and, almost invariably, they will enact that role.

Furthermore, the issue of "to kiss or not to kiss" can be avoided or evaded indefinitely (if such is your clean-cut preference),—by the simple expedient of greeting, and taking leave of, your beaux with a cheerful phrase and a quick, war handclasp.

Down the centuries, the handclasp has meant friend's salute to friend,—the unguarded, unarmed gesture of trust and good will. Thus, this manner of leavestaking, when initiated by a girl, gives a man to understand (without his really knowing why), that she anticipates from him (and cheerily assumes he will be content with) chivalrous conduct. But if she loiters on her doorstep, pursuing scraps of conversation while eyeing him shyly or hopefully, he is apt to assume she wants to be kissed. And it is such feminine angling for masculine caresses that robs her of vaule in his eyes.

New Type of Cape

Hollywood, Calif. — Howard Shoup reports that he is now designing lots of capes because he's tired of seeing women with their coats tossed nonchalantly over their shoulders, the armless sleeves flapping forlornly in the wind. And to do a cape completely different Howard conceived the idea of one attached to a vestee. He used Persian lamb. Brenda Marshall will wear it in "Footsteps in the Dark."

Capitalites Skip Parties For Senate Hearing

By Hope Ridings Miller

"I CALLED OFF a luncheon of my own, and I'm missing two other parties this afternoon in order to be here—so please don't mention my name if you write about whom you saw here," pleaded a prominent woman who had a front row seat yesterday at the hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Hope Ridings Miller

I promised I wouldn't tell on her, and I won't—because she was only one of a large number of Capitalites who took the day off to listen in on the most informative meetings on the Washington calendar yesterday.

"We're not carrying on a side show," said Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the committee, as a burst of applause punctuated one of Col. Lindbergh's statements. But side show or not, the program had spectators on the edge of their chairs most of the morning and afternoon, and a sizable number of social notables were in the throng that pushed through the door and found seats as near the front as possible.

Watching proceedings intently were wives of several Senators in the isolationist block. Mrs. Hiram Johnson and Mrs. Bennett Clark didn't miss a trick during any testimony. Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, smartly turned out in a black ensemble, with a rhinestone ornament on her hat to match the pin at her throat, sat with Mrs. Harold Sims, who has come to town for a visit.

MRS. MILLARD TYDINGS, escorted to a choice seat by Senator Tydings, looked like a Gainsborough portrait in a dashing black hat, turned up on one side and trimmed with bright red feathers. A smart tailored black suit and a white blouse were further accents for her smart ensemble.

"Even the Supreme Court has turned out for the hearing," was a whisper rippling through the crowd as Justice Frank Murphy was ushered into a ringside seat. Near him was Mrs. Claude Pepper, whose husband asked Col. Lindbergh more questions than all the other members of the committee put together. In the same row with Mrs. Pepper was pretty Elizabeth Love, the actress who has a leading role in "The Male Animal," current play at the National Theater. I noticed that Miss Love wore a British insignia pin at the throat of her trim gray frock and that she watched the drama being enacted before her without a single change of expression.

MRS. COURTLANDT BARNES, in the row just back of the Senate committee, came early and stayed late for the hearings. She hasn't missed a one, I understand, since the lend-lease bill has been up for discussion. Mrs. Frank West was another of the "America First" group on hand for yesterday's hearings.

Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell arrived with Countess Cassini shortly before Col. Lindbergh took the stand. Mrs. Carter Glass, wearing a petal-trimmed pancake turban and a mink coat over a simple black frock, was glimpsed among the spectators; as were Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Charles Pynchon, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford and Mrs. Frank Buck.

"Well, whether you agree with Lindbergh or not, you've got to hand it to him—he's sincere, and he's smart," said Mrs. Theodore Acheson, whose small black turban, set off with red feathers, was one of the smartest hats there. "Of course, I don't agree with him," she added.

BRITISH-BORN Mrs. William Lacy was there; also, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, and Cabot Lodge, who had a seat on one side of the room while Senator Lodge was on the other.

"I intend to be here on time for every single session from now on," whispered a well-dressed woman whom I didn't recognize. She was a late arrival yesterday morning and had a hard time getting in the door . . . until a Senator arrived with his wife and four of her friends. The woman in question then saw her opportunity, and took it. She walked right in with the group, and was soon esconced in a front row seat.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

THE AIR around Washington is thick with British and Spanish accents this winter. Distinguished visitors are pouring in at almost as rapid a rate as the 100 defense workers coming here each day.

DUDLEY HARMON

From champion skier to a leading member of the Catholic laity has been the career of Arnold Lunn, who founded a tremendous travel agency. He is former president of several ski clubs and has written many books on that sport and mountaineering. Mr. Lunn did a lot to promote skiing in the Alps.

He knows this country well, especially the West, and wrote a "Guide to Montana." He is also the author of volumes on religious subjects and is lecturing at Notre Dame University. Mrs. Foster Stearns, wife of the Representative from New Hampshire, will give a small tea for him tomorrow at the Mayflower.

ONE OF the ever growing contingent of Latin-American visitors is Dr. Aurelio Miro Quesada, of Peru. He is a brother-in-law of Carlos Mackehenie, of the Peruvian Embassy, and heads his country's delegation of students enrolled at Duke University for several months' study. A distinguished journalist, Dr. Quesada is a member of the editorial staff of the 100-year-old Lima daily, El Commercio, which his ancestors founded. The visitor got the greatest thrill of his Washington stay when the State Department arranged for him to attend President Roosevelt's press conference on Tuesday.

A ONE-WOMAN goodwill tour is being made by Senora Maria Lopez de Pamin, of Mexico City. Armed with a letter from President Camacho and other dignitaries, she is in Washington for a few days before touring the country. Senora de Pamin is connected with the government newspaper, El Nacional. She moves about with her own special interpreter. Senora de Pamin thinks the Nazi menace to Mexico comes not so much from spies and "quinta colonnistsas" as from naturalized foreigners who hold important positions in Mexican industry.

BETTY BEALE leaves for New York today to weekend with her old friend Emily Post. Though in her '60's, the etiquette authority continues to work 8 or 10 hours a day. One of her tasks is handling her 8,000 letters a week. When Miss Beale first met Mrs. Post at tea, the latter helped herself to cookies without first offering her guest any—a major etiquette crime explained by the fact that Mrs. Post was momentarily completely absorbed in her favorite topic, politics.

Mrs. Alexander Will Attend Final Musicale

Mrs. Henry Martin Alexander, of New York, is coming to Washington especially for the last of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicales at the Mayflower Hotel Monday when the famed Wagnerian opera stars, Mme. Lotte Lehmann, Austrian-American soprano, and Lauritz Melchior, Danish tenor, will present a song recital.

Mrs. Alexander, who supervises the benefits for the pension fund for musicians, the latest of which was a program this winter when Mme. Flagstad gave her services, will get to town Sunday and be honor guest at the luncheon that day that her cousin, Mme. Littauer, who lives at the Mayflower, will give at Mrs. Curtis' Club, 1925 F Street Northwest.

Mrs. Alexander, however, like the Melchiors, will be Mrs. Townsend's house guests. Mme. Lehmann will stay at the Mayflower as she is arriving with little time to spare and leaving immediately after the concert for Boston, where she will sing on Wednesday.

Mrs. Townsend asks that her subscribers be in their seats next Monday morning at 11:10, as the program is to begin at 11;15. In it Mr. Melchior, who increased an already wide popularity in the National Capital with his graciousness at the President's Birthday celebrations, will sing songs of all the Scandinavian countries and, for the first time in Washington, the closing air from Wagner's great opera, "Parsifal."

Mme. Lehmann, whose German lieder already is a tradition, will sing songs by Schumann, Schubert, Brahms and Richard Strauss. In response to many requests, Mme. Lehmann will also do Schubert's "Erlkoenig" and the two artists will give the beautiful "Spring Song" duet from "Walkuere" in one of their two groups in duet.

These are the artists who set a top record last year in attendance for these musicales and it is anticipated that they will do so this year.

Senorita Guevara Wins Women's Fellowship

Emerita E. Guevara, of Panama, who has been awarded the Latin-American Fellowship for 1941-1942 by the American Association of University Women

The Post Club Editor.

The Committee on Fellowship Awards of the American Association of University Women has announced the award of the Latin-American Fellowship for 1941-42 to Senorita Emerita E. Guevara, of Panama.

This fellowship, which gives opportunity to a South American woman scholar for a year's study and research in this country, has been awarded by the A. A. U. W. since 1917. Ten years ago it was adopted as a special project of the fellowship committee of the Washington branch of the association. Since then, about $1,000 a year has been contributed by the local organization toward the establishment of a permanent endowment.

Mrs. David Wing, headmistress of the Madeira School, is chairman of the local fellowship committee which will sponsor a bridge party as a benefit for the endowment fund on February 14 at the clubhouse, 1634 I Street. Attendance at the affair is not limited to club members and many are entertaining parties of friends. Patronesses for the benefit include Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and wives of Latin-American diplomats. Mrs. Frank Smith, a member of the fellowship committee, is general chairman of arrangements.

Senorita Guevara will come to this country for cancer research, but the institution at which her work will be pursued has not yet been designated. The committee of the national association makes careful investigation of the resources available to the scholar and determines the place best suited to her needs before approving plans for her study.

This year's fellowship scholar is Senorita Marina Nunez de Prado, of Bolivia, noted woman sculptor, who is now studying in New York, mastering certain techniques. She is particularly distinguished for her interpretation of the old Indian civilization.

Members of the national fellowship committee of the A. A. U. W. are Dr. Katharine J. Gallagher, of Goucher College, chairman; Dr. Adeline DeSale Link, of the University of Chicago; Dr. Florence D. White, of Vassar College; Dr. Helen C. White, of the University of Wisconsin; Dr. Dorothy C. Bacon, of Smith College; Dr. Hope Hibbard, of Oberlin College; Miss Hetty Goldman, of the Institute for Advanced Studies, Princeton University; Dr. Kathryn McHale, general director of the association.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

HELEN SLATOR, executive secretary of the Advisory Committee on Wholesale Distribution, has just arrived from New York City to take charge of the offices of the new committee located in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

The organization represents all wholesale industries and was formed in November at a meeting called by Miss Harriet Elliott, head of the consumer division of the National Defense Council. The position held by Mrs. Slator is unique. Her work will be to direct the committee's efforts in solving problems that arise in connection with the defense program, which threaten the standard of living. Defense needs will determine in a large measure the consumer problms, she believes.

The office is designed to be a clearing house for information which will answer questions for the consumer, particularly those in relation to buying and to the maintenance of living standards.

William H. Tyler, of Texas, representing the wholesale grocers, is chairman of the advisory committee, and Robert M. Adair, of Columbus, Ohio, representing the wholesale dry goods industry, heads the executive committee.

Mrs. Slator has been public relations director for a large wholesale drug firm for the last four years. Previous to that she was director of woman's club service for the New York Herald Tribune and New York Times.

She is a member of the New York City Zonta Club, a director of Advertising Women of New York and chairman of Consumer Education for the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs.

That's One Way to Wake Them

District Guardsmen received on their first morning in Camp Meade yesterday a terrific assault on their ears. At 5 a. m. the reveille gun blasted a shot and into this roar the camp fire siren sounded. The gun, of course, was according to the book. Someone, inadvertently, leaned on the siren button of the fire detail truck. The two noises struck together and emptied all cots.

We Seem to Remember, Too!

After Col. Charles A. Lindbergh testified against Administration's Lend-Lease Bill before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday, the Senators began questioning the flier. Senator Pepper, asked:

"When did you first go to Europe, Colonel?"

"In 1927," quietly replied the man who in that year became a world celebrity for his nonstop flight to Paris.

Civil Service Restricts Employes and Visitors

Civil Service Commission today will clamp down on the coming and going of employes and visitors in its buildings.

Six entrances will be closed on the main building at Ninth and F Streets Northwest. Visitors will be permitted to enter only at the main entrance and at the public entrance at Seventh Street. Employes will be permitted to use one additional entrance in the rear of the building. Visitors won't be permitted to stroll unguarded all through the building as they have been doing. Meantime, plans are being made to photograph and fingerprint all employes. Each will be required to wear a badge with his picture on it. War and Navy Departments have taken similar precautions.

A story is being told that U. S. Housing Authority wanted to buy a Buick for official use. A law limits the purchase price of its cars to $800 and a new Buick can't be bought for that price. But USHA got it, without tires and other necessary equipment. Later on another fund was used to buy the equipment.

Census will lay off 232 temporary employes next week, mainly coders and clerks. On March 1, however, only 94 will be separated under present plans. During the spring months the number of layoffs will be stepped up rapidly, possibly reaching 1,000 a month. The bureau still needs card punchers, approved by Civil Service. Card punchers are being hired daily and several hundred additional will be put to work . . . Incidentally, a scrap already has started for the job as census director. Dr. Vergil Reed, assistant director, would unquestionably be promoted if merit and fitness were the deciding factors. But Reed is a Republican and the White House is understood to have a list of seven Democratic "lame ducks" who have been promised jobs.

War and Navy Hiring 8,000 Civilians Weekly

More than 250,000 civilian jobs in the War and Navy Departments have been filled by the Civil Service Commission since June, 1940. No letup is in sight as the two departments are now hiring new defense employes at the rate of 8,000 weekly. Employment Service is helping the commission recruit new workers. More than 25,000 additional employes have been hired here by the two departments . . . Last month more than 80,000 people personally came to the commission offices to ask about jobs and more than 18,000 phone calls were received.

Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, famed aviatrix, who is credited with idea of teaching high school and college students to fly, is working with CAA as a private flying specialist. She'll coordinate aviation work in such agencies as WPA, Office of Education and the Defense Commission. Mrs. Omlie taught flying in Tennessee high schools and colleges before the civilian pilots training program was started.

Claude V. Parsons yesterday was confirmed by the Senate as assistant USHA administrator. He has taken over the agency as Nathan Straus is ill and will be away for some time yet . . . Leslie F. Huntt, former PWA employe, has been made acting president of the Government-owned Virgin Islands Co. . . . James H. Edwards and Robert F. Martin have been appointed heads of new divisions at the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Lend-Lease Stand Starts U. F. W. A. Battle

Another fight has been started within U. F. W. A. by the action of the Commerce local in denouncing the lend-lease bill. The local adopted a resolution in which it was said that the bill "would set up a one-man dictatorship" and that it was "the most dangerous threat to the liberties and peace of our Nation."

Representative Magnusan has introduced a bill which would require the Navy to pay overtime to Civil Service employes in navy yards. The department has been asked for an opinion and it's a good bet that it will suggest overtime pay for all employes, or none at all . . . There is no word limit or entry blanks for the recreational contest being sponsored for Federal employes by the Federal Employe Council and WJSV. Just send letters or postcards to WJSV telling how you spend your spare time and what the council can do to promote recreational activities among employes. The contest closes February 16. Two winners will be sent to St. Petersburg for a week's vacation.

Zoning Plan May Save Crystal City

New Proposal Would Enable Board to Permit $15,000,000 Project

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday offered a plan to the District Zoning Commission which may save the proposed $15,000,000 Crystal City development from oblivion.

John Nolen, jr., city planner for the commission, appeared before the zoning body at a public hearing with an amendment to the zoning code which would permit the erection of "community units," similar to Crystal City, without changing the basic zoning of the area. Objectionable features of the "city" which would be located at the Dean site, Florida and Connecticut Avenues Northwest, would be eliminated under the planning commission plan.

Last month, when the Crystal City promoters appeared before the commission asking a change from residential to commercial for the Dean site, many objections were voiced by proprietors of adjacent property.

Zoning Change Opposed

Protestants at that time said they did not want a change in zoning of the large tract of land and also were opposed to the erection of shops and stores on the Connecticut Avenue side of the property. As explained by Nolen, the Crystal City planners, if his amendment is adopted by the commission, could appear before the Board of Zoning Adjustment for a variance from the zonging regulations and proceed with specific plans as approved by the adjustment board.

Nolen said that if the commission were to change the zoning of a large site like the Dean tract "it would lose complete control of the area." Under his plan, a building permit would be issued for a specific plan presented at a public hearing before the zoning adjustment board.

No one appeared at the hearing to oppose the plan and, although the Crystal City people were not officially represented, they did send an observer.

The Zoning Commission will not act on this proposal until some time next week, when 18 other cases heard yesterday will be considered.

Parking Plan Discussed

A proposal to permit use of vacant lots in residential districts for the temporary parking of automobiles, subject to approval by the adjustment board, was discussed by the commission. In case of an "A" restricted residential zone, this would be permitted only if the vacant lot adjoined an alley or separated the restricted area from a commercial district. Representatives of the Manor Park Citizens Association appeared to protest this plan.

The Capital Transit Co. appeared for a change in zoning of its property located on the northeast corner of Wisconsin Avenue and Calvert Street Northwest. Site of an old car barn, the property has been unused since 1914, when fire destroyed the barn. The company asked for a change to permit an apartment development. Nearby residents protested.

Upper Connecticut Avenue residents appeared to protest rezoning of the vacant lot located on the south side of Legation Street, west of Connecticut Avenue Northwest. Andrew D. Torre, owner of the land, asked for permission to build a $500,000 apartment house on the land.

Police Inspector Holmes 64 Today; May Retire Soon

They wouldn't say yes, and they wouldn't say no, but there was no stopping reports around police headquarters yesterday that two top-ranking officials were about to retire.

Inspector William E. Holmes, traffic supervisor, who marks his sixty-fourth birthday today, is expected to retire April 1, but he said yesterday that thus far at least he hasn't made a formal request. He goes on leave today for 45 days "to look after my son's business." His son, Capt. Earl Holmes, who operates a printing concern, is on duty with the Marines in Cuba.

Capt. James E. Bobo, commander of Thirteenth Precinct station, admitted yesterday that he contemplated retiring, but he had not decided whether he'd leave in April or May. Meanwhile, he plans to take accumulated leave beginning March 1.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, both denied reports they also were contemplating retiring.

Good Cheer . . .

Postlude

By Rav C. B. Brown.

Lieut. Charles Benter conducts the United States Navy Band Orchestra in a concert of American music on Thursday night in Marine Barracks Auditorium. Program of compositions by Dunn, Cadman, Schelling, White, Taylor, Carpenter, McDonald and Still.

American composers would have less cause to complain about unperformed music, if more conductors followed the example of Lieut. Charles Benter, who devoted last evening's concert by the U. S. Navy Band Orchestra to eight native musicians. In a series of such concerts, the roll call of the States could probably be answered, for it is doubtful if any one of our Commonwealths will be found lacking a composer. On this occasion seven States were represented as the birthplaces of talent, for James Philip Dunn and Joseph Deems Taylor were born in New York, Paul White in Maine, Ernest Henry Schelling in New Jersey, Charles Wakefield Cadman in Pennsylvania, John Alden Carpenter in Illinois, William Grant Still in Mississippi, and Harl McDonald in Colorado.

BROWN

There were no premieres on Lieut. Benter's program, but composers would rather have repetitions of their works than a first performance followed by silent neglect. The only way Americans can become familiar with the music of their composers is through performances as frequent as are given to certain stock European items. In the word of art, Aesop's adage is usually reversed, and familiarity breeds not contempt but admiration.

The concert began with Dunn's effective "Overture on Negro Themes," which is not only a fine piece of craftsmanship, but also has the virtue of using themes that have not been overworked. This was followed by Cadman's "Dark Dancers of the Mardi Gras," a fantasy of boisterous mood and colorful orchestration. It has a contagious rhapsodic sweep and conveys the carnival spirit with unflagging zest.

Schelling's "A Victory Ball" is as timely today as it was when first performed in 1923. Part of the world is again at war, and the price of victory will again be paid. This powerfully ironic music reminds us that some rejoicing is bitter with the salt of tears.

The contrast of humor came with White's clever "Five Miniatures," in which imitative devices of instrumentation inevitably evoke laughter from the auditors. In the same vein were "Jabberwocky" and "Insects" from Taylor's suite, "Through the Looking Glass," as well as two excerpts from Carpenter's "Adventures in a Perambulator."

From McDonald's second symphony Lieut. Benter chose the rhythmically insistent and tonally clangorous rumba movement. The program closed with Still's "Afro-American" symphony which is wearing very well and becoming more interesting with every hearing.

O. C. Short Elected Head Of D.C. Masons

The advisory board of Masonic Clubs of the District of Columbia, in annual session, last night elected Oliver C. Short, past president of the Anchor Club, as president for te ensuing year. The advisory board is composed of representatives from 15 Masonic clubs functioning in the District.

Troop 73 Scouts To Hear Lecture By Rabbi Metz

Boy Scouts of Troop 73 will be guests at services tonight at 8:15 at Adas Israel Synagogue, where the Rabbi Solomon H. Metz will launch a lecture series on "The Philosophies and Basic Principles of the Jewish Religion."

The forum will be led by Saul Lichtenberg, noted attorney and former Scout leader, on the subject of "Scouts and Citizenship."

Symphony

The second report luncheon to announce the progress toward the $107,600 goal of the National Symphony Orchestra's eleventh annual sustaining fund campaign will be held at 12:30 p. m. today at the Carlton Hotel, with a committee under Mrs. R. H. Dunlap in charge of arrangements.

At the first report luncheon on Tuesday it was announced that $33,787.31, or 31 per cent of the goal, had been raised during the first 24 hours of the campaign. The drive will continue through Thursday under the general chairmanship of Walter Bruce Howe.

Today's luncheon will be dedicated to business and the professions, stressing their relation to the success of the orchestra's drive to provide for its 1941-42 season. Principal speaker will be Senator Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine.

6 and Little Man, He Finds Way 2 Miles to Home by Himself

Nor dark nor distance deterred 6-year-old Ronald Clarke yesterday when he found himself faced with the greatest adventure of his life.

Ronald is a first-grade pupil at Stanton School located more than two miles from his home, 4452 Alabama Avenue Southeast. Customarily, his mother, Mrs. Mildred Clarke, drives Ronald to school and picks him up at 3 p. m.

Yesterday Mrs. Clarke had some business downtown and asked a neighbor to fetch Ronald home. But when Mrs. Clarke got there at 5 p. m., Ronald wasn't there. She called the neighbor and learned that the latter had not gone for Ronald, because of a mixup. She phoned friends along the route home, but they hadn't seen Ronald either.

Worried, Mrs. Clarke turned to the police for help. She called her husband, A. D. Clarke, a motorcycle patrolman, who notified cruiser cars by police radio. And about 6 p. m., a few blocks from home, police found Ronald weary and awed by his own performance, but still trudging along. Tired of waiting, he had started for home and walked virtually all the way.

Just after being fed, and just before falling asleep immediately after, Ronald remarked: "I think I'll join a hiking club."

Bill Offered To Plug D.C. Tax Loophole

It Would Extend Levies to All Who 'Have an Abode' Here For 6 Months of Year

The District Commissioners yesterday sent to Congress five bills and reports on two bills now pending in the House, including an amendment to the local income tax law designed to eliminate the "domicile" controversy.

Under the amendment the tax would apply not only to persons "domiciled" in the District on the last day of the taxable year but also to all persons "having a place of abode" in the city for at least six months of the taxable year.

Glenn Simmon, assistant corporation counsel, said this would apply the local income levy to Government employes who claim legal residence in other jurisdictions but who actually reside in the District. All nonresidents who earn a portion of their salary in the District would be taxed for that portion but would receive credit for taxes paid in other jurisdictions, under the proposed legislation.

Would Get Tax Credit

Simmon said the salaries of those working here and living in Maryland or Virginia would also be taxed but proper credit would be allowed for their taxes in these States. Since tax rates are higher than the District's, Maryland and Virginia persons choosing to pay taxes in those States would not have to pay a tax here. In addition to these new features the proposal also calls for a reduction from $25 to $10 of the fee required of all corporations filing a return in the District.

Other bills sent to Congress would:

Authorize the Federal Government to furnish steam from the central heating plant to the District Building and the new Recorder of Deeds Building. The Commissioners said this would save $6,000 annually. Steam is now obtained from a 33-year-old high pressure steam and electric generating plant in the District Building.

Recommended by the Bar

Prohibit assignment of wages in the District. This will was recommended by the District Bar Association.

Consolidate the Municipal and Police Courts into a new Municipal Court, consisting of criminal and civil branches. The nine judges (of the combined courts) could be utilized in bringing up to date and keeping up to date the dockets of both courts, the Commissioners said.

Authorize purchase of as many parking meters as desired, with the revenues thereof to be attached to the highway fund.

Adverse reports were sent on two bills—one of which would make the District dry and the other would deputize watchmen at the National Zoological Park as policemen.

Speeding Drivers Draw Wrath Of Citizens' Group

Speeding motorists have been rampant on Connecticut Avenue, members of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens' Association stated last night at their regular meeting in All Souls Church.

The group also complained of snow and ice being left on Klingle Bridge.

Objections were raised by the group to proposals that the liquor law be modified to permit sales up until 2 a. m., Sunday. Opposition was raised to any increase in property taxes.

The Police Boys' Club was voted $10, the Red Cross, $5, and the Symphony Orchestra, $5.

Harry Groves presided over the meeting which concluded with the showing of movies by the National Park Service of St. Augustine, Fla.

Mrs. Wurdeman's Will

Under the will of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Wurdeman, of Silver Spring, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, Md., her entire estate goes in equal shares to her children, Bertha E. Gray, Albert O. Wurdeman and Elmer C. Wurdeman. Albert O. Wurdeman is named executor. The instrument, which was executed September 6, 1940, does not state the value of the estate.

Draft Objectors Unite to Seek Means of Clarifying Position

Sessions Held Secret To Avoid Threats; Discuss War Ethics

Twenty young men—and a girl—met last night in a house in the 1700 block of New Hampshire Avenue Northwest to consider their position as conscientious objectors to the use of force in a nation that has decided to draft young men and to teach them to fight.

All the young men have registered for the selective service. They base their objections, chiefly, on religious grounds though some are not religious in the sense that they adhere to one of the standard faiths. For these, the objections may be said to be moral. All are of the belief that, ideally, there can be no exception to the Commandment—"Thou shalt not kill."

Members of various faiths, they are Government workers and students. They declined to identify themselves by name and requested that their meeting place be not made public. They said experience has taught them—they've been meeting for some time now—that identification of one of their number brings immediately many threats by mail and telephone.

They emphasize that their meetings are not secret, explaining that they do not advertise them simply because that to do so would throw them open to persons who desire to use conscientious objection as a means of draft evasion.

Though they realize that labor of any sort in these times is some kind of a contribution to defense preparation, they evidence interest in the work camps proposed for objectors to military service.

Their purpose in meeting is to consider collectively their position as conscientious objectors before the draft boards. Most of the young men have received from their boards a long questionnaire calculated to develop precisely the objector's reasons. The young men consider how best to answer these questions in order to make their positions understood.

Their meetings, they say, are known to officials at Selective Service headquarters and are open to a visit from them at any time. Their official spokesman is Paul C. French of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors with offices in the National Press Building.

The discussion theme last night was "force." Some held that ideally, there could be no excuse for resort to force but that as a practical matter, the world being what is is, you might have to some time.

Said the girl, Virginia Kinnisten, 20, of Takoma Park, Md., whose draft-age husband is a member of the group and, like herself, a pacifist "for years":

"Who is to decide right from wrong in event of such an attack? I think to be consistent you must insist that use of force at any time is wrong."

Highlands Citizens' Unit Against More Taxes on Gasoline

The Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night went on record opposing any additional gasoline tax at this time for any purpose.

Favored by the group was the proposed Concord Avenue-Military Road plan for the crosstown bus route.

The association adopted a resolution requesting the extension of Fourth Street between Nichols Avenue and Valley Avenue Southeast.

A committee of five was appointed to work on the Police Boys' Club drive. Members are: Miss Bessie B. Warren, John Juergens, M. J. Warren, Mrs. C. J. Wall and Mrs. Bessie Butler.

Family Case Settlements 'Shock' Jurist

Greater uniformity by the courts in settling domestic relations cases was asked last night by Justice Bolitha Laws in a talk before 100 women of the District bar at the Continental Hotel.

Justice Laws described as a "shocking situation" the great disparity shown by District judges in setting amounts in maintenance cases.

The public becomes disillusioned by this disparity, he said, and loses confidence in the ability of the courts to deal out equal justice.

He recommended that a study be made of all domestic cases settled in recent months so that a graph could be made tending to standardize decisions and amounts.

At the same time the jurist criticized lawyers in domestic cases who, he said, come to court with "arguments instead of facts."

The recently established domestic relations commissioner plan was credited with having brought about fairer and speedier decisions by the judges. Of 156 cases brought before the courts between October and January, he said, 122 cases were settled and only 22 objections were filed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, president of the women's bar, was chairman of the meeting.

Capper Now For Sumners Vote Plan

Decides to Drop His Own Proposal, Reintroduces Measure in Senate

Abandoning his own joint resolution to give residents of Washington national representation, Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday reintroduced in the Senate the Sumners resolution which was reported favorably last year by the House Judiciary Committee, only to be blocked by the Rules Committee.

Senator Capper explained that the Sumners resolution proposes "a much simplified plan" for amending the Constitution and authorizing Congress to grant District residents the vote.

"After careful consideration of this question, which means so much to the voteless and unrepresented people of the National Capital community," Capper said, "and with the approval of the citizen proponents I have introduced a joint resolution identical with that which Judge Sumners has already reintroduced in the House and will not offer the form which I have for years sponsored.

Approval More Likely

"As I stated to the Senate August 1, 1939, and again on August 13, 1940, I approve the Sumners proposal and believe that there is much greater likelihood of it receiving favorable action than the form I have been sponsoring.

"It is much simpler in form and overcomes objections to carrying detailed legislation into the Constitution. This amendment, if added to the Constitution, would round out in a logical way the powers of Congress over the Nation's seat of government.

Senator Capper pointed out that the Sumners resolution has a provision specifically authorizing Congress to delegate self-government to the District and a safety clause which would enable Congress to amend or repeal any legislation it may enact after the Constitution is amended.

"This is a broad enabling provision to be added to the Constitution," he said. "It contains no controversial items. All such details are left for subsequent legislation by Congress. It simply broadens the powers of Congress to do for the District whenever or whatever in its judgment it believes should be done.

"It is a perfectly safe proposal, as the reservation of the right to amend or repeal seems to dissolve any objection which might be raised against admitting these isolated Americans to the councils of our Nation."

...dric March, Betty Field Score in Conrad's 'Victory'

New Picture at Metropolitan Exerts Power Of Both Psychological and Physical Action, With Fine Cast in Roles of Importance

"VICTORY." Paramount picturization of the story by Joseph Conrad, adapted to the screen by John L. Balderston, costarring Fredric March and Betty Field, with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Jerome Cowan, Sig Rumann, Margaret Wycherly, Fritz Feld, Lionel Joyce, Rafaelo Ottiano and Chester Gan. Directed by John Cromwell. At the Metropolitan Theater.

IF IT HAD NOT BEEN WRITTEN by Joseph Conrad, it probably would have been by W. Somerset Maugham. It is fortunate in any circumstances that somebody should have written the story of "Victory," for from it John L. Balderston has adapted a screen play of far more than casual worth.

BELL

When this Paramount film version of a taut tale of the Dutch East Indies is disclosed for the first time on a Washington screen at the Metropolitan Theater today, its audiences will discover an allegorical drama dealing restrainedly with such moods and emotions as loneliness, fear, courage, revenge and love. These elements have been blended into an acting piece as remote from the conventional Oriental melodrama as "Angels Over Broadway," for example, was apart from the cinema's stereotyped contemplation of metropolitan night life. "Victory," by the most simple means, manages to achieve deep human interest, excitement and suspense in unusual measure.

A hapless world wanderer, maligned by his fellows for the business transgressions of an associate no longer among the living, isolates himself with a Chinese house servant on a tiny island in the Java Sea, where they live alone. On a visit to a more populous trading center, he befriends a persecuted member of a touring "ladies orchestra," who has been "sold" by the scavengers exploiting the organization to the bestial proprietor of a waterfront hotel, bar and dance hall. To rid himself of an English "gentleman" and his two sinister companions, Mein Herr Boniface Schomberg apprises them of Henrik Heyst's lonely island and the rich plunder of stolen wealth they can obtain there by quietly and safely murdering its inhabitants. The plan does not work out quite in accordance with the blueprints.

Once moved to Mr. Heyst's idyllic little haven of escape from the world, the drama becomes no less psychological than physical in its tense and thrilling conflict. Here the power of virtue, trust and compassion is pitted against the predatory instincts that know no law but greed. There is a unique quality of excitement in the final sequence of the picture, in which "Mr. Jones," leader of the piratical threesome—his man-gorilla, Pedro, neatly shot down by the Chinese servant and his "private secretary," Ricardo, done in by a stab in the back with his own knife by the girl—finds himself cringing and afraid, in a pitch-black room he never has entered before, hearing his futile bullets counted off, one by one, by the triumphant Heyst, whose victory lies in the discovery that the love of an heroic woman can change one's whole outlook upon life. Here is something distinctly worth seeing—and hearing—by anyone in quest of that tingling in the spine so rarely negotiated these days.

Paramount's concession to the merit of the story may be estimated from the caliber of the cast it has assembled for its interpretation. Fredric March is cast in the role of Heyst and plays it with deliberation and restraint, adding effectively to the power of the play by the moderation of his performance. In the opposite role of the courageous and grateful heroine, Betty Field adds further to her stature as a young actress of complete naturalness and charm. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, as the malignantly bored leader of the roving gangsters; Jerome Cowan, as his chief henchman, and Lionel Royce, as the film's embodiment of murderous brutality, provide the essential contrast to tighten the play's grip upon the public's ganglia.

Other important, but far less vital roles, are played with skill by Sig Rumann, as the vengeful hotel-keeper; Margaret Wycherly, as his terror-stricken wife; Fritz Feld and Rafaela Ottiano, operators of the itinerant orchestra, and Chester Gan, as the Chinese houseman, whose white feather turns to crimson at the opportune moment.

The supplementary features of the new Metropolitan bill include Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Dog in the Orchard," a cartoon comedy in color and a new issue of the composite newsreel as auxiliaries of a major subject that may have come to Washington unheralded but will not leave unsung by those who are wise enough to see it.

Famed 'Grapevine' Paper in Film

With "La Libre Belgique" once again being printed, as it was for four years during World War I, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Voice of Liberty" went into production. The tiny, four-page paper, which was published secretly by the Belgian people during the German occupation of Belgium during the last war, is revived for John Nesbitt's newest Passing Parade.

In the leading roles are Egon Brecher, Wolfgang Zilzer, Lotti Palfi and Charles Wagonheim.

By Richard L. Coe

"ROAD SHOW." Hal Roach-United Artists picturization of a novel by Eric Hatch, with Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Charles Butterworth, Patsy Kelly, George E. Stone, Margaret Roach, Polly Ann Young, Edward J. Norris, Marjorie Woodworth, Florence Bates, Willie Best and The Charioteers. Music by Hoagy Carmichael. Directed by Mr. Roach. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Comedy-conscious Hal Roach has a new and somtimes rollicking film-usical on the Capitol screen this week, titled "Road Show," but the real sock at the big F Street house comes from oldster Joe Howard. The composer of "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" is on leave from his "Gay Nineties" radio program and from Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe to top what he says is his last variety bill.

Forget you're over 70, Joe. Forget it was 50 years ago in this very city that you made your first stage try. Forget the pseudo-sentiment that makes many an oldtimer's comeback more a strain than a lift. But, Joe, remember you're a performer as smart as the freshest youngster, a fellow who knows how to put over a song, to strut a cakewalk, to twirl a topper. It isn't because you're old that the crowd applauds you; it's because you're good. What vaudeville needs is personalities at home on the stage; so don't desert the ship, Joe.

We'll get back to Joe Howard and what he does after telling you something about Massa Roach's daffy picture. "Road Show" doesn't pretend to be a world beater, but it sets out to get laughs and gets 'em. Slapstick in pace and with Harry Langdon as one of the adapters for the Eric Hatch story, it allows Patsy Kelly, Adolphe Menjou and Charles Butterworth lots of freedom.

Patsy Kelly's Indian

In its tale of two men with rich relatives and who escape from a mental asylum (that's right), it allows Patsy Kelly's Indian Princess getup a la Brooklyn to mesmerize a silent Indian a la reservation. George E. Stone is a riot as that Indian. It plumps unsuspecting John Hubbard into a lion tamer's outfit with Willie Best as his helper. It gives Charley Butterworth a taffy machine to tangle with and Adolphe Menjou a camera that's always a snapshot behind.

"Road Show" has the added advantage of music by Hoagy Carmichael, who never seems to lose the knack of turning out tunes you could hum at first crack. This time there are "Yum! Yum!" "Calliope Jane" and "I Should Have Known You Years Ago" to charm the ASCAP-ed ears of radio fans who miss the soothing Carmichael's "Stardust."

There's no need to go into "Road Show's" framework, except to add that Carole Landis' ditto is pleasantly in evidence, that she sings nicely and that her traveling circus should have paid off long before she came upon those two fugitives from a nuthouse, Menjou and Hubbard.

Three Fine Acts

Getting back to Joe Howard and his stage fellows, you'll find Joe singing a group of the songs that made him the Irving Berlin of the nineties and doing that cakewalk Eva Puck and Sammy White made so memorable a part of "Show Boat." He also introduces his latest song, a rhythmical "Over Here" that reverses Georgie Cohan's martial song in more than title.

Two other top-notch acts brightens the vaudeville bill. Those amazing Kanazawa acrobats become Japan's most effective ambassadors with their breathtaking tumbling. And Wally Brown brings new gags to that technique Oliver Wakefield picked up from someone before him. As it is, Wally is swell at the line and a far funnier chap than on his last visit here. With him is the irrepressible Annette Ames, whose name you may not recall, but whose face you will.

The Rhythm Rockets are kept busy on their own and as background for toe-top Vivian Fay, climaxing with a dash of Brahms' Hungarian Rhapsody. Sam Jack Kaufman leads his orchestra in music from Rudolph Friml, with Lynn Allison in the pit to sweeten the lyrics and, incidentally, look pretty. Art Brown adds monkey business to his organ grinding, too.

But it's Joe Howard you'll remember, and for good reason. Don't go away, Joe.

Big Chair

Director Robert Z. Leonard is using his specially made chair on the "Ziegfeld Girl" set, as an excuse to keep from dieting. The prop department made it of natural oak lined with leather to fit the proportions of the 245-pound director. "And if I reduce, I won't fit my chair," he points out.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Feb. 6.

The opening of Walt Disney's supreme effort, "Fantasia," wasn't a command performance, as most of our Hollywood premieres are. Therefore, a mere sprinkling of top stars showed up. But they were such a representative group that I shall name them. First, Shirley Temple and Jane Withers. Jane was at the microphone when Shirley arrived and rushed quietly into the theater. The Bob Montgomerys, Jimmy Cagneys, George Murphys, Mary Martin, Edgar Bergen, Lubitsches, and Mrs. Sam Goldwyn just about wind up the list. Not that we missed the others, because Los Angeles society leaders were there and the house was packed.

HOPPER

But in this town, where Walt Disney has done so much, you would think the industry would want to pay him homage. But no—this is a scratch-my-back and I'll-scratch-yours town. You send your stars to my opening—I'll send mine to yours. Walt has no stars to lend, and doesn't want to borrow. So, therefore, he's not important in our stars' daily routine. I just happen to think he's the most important person we've ever had in motion pictures.

"Fantasia" is a unique experience—and the man who produced it, by his own admission, doesn't know a lot about music. Says when he first heard about the Toccata and Fugue in D Minor by Bach, he thought they were talking about a couple of people like Romeo and Juliet, or Damon and Pythias. If only Walt's animators had done Deems Taylor, he'd have looked prettier in Walt's garden of fantasy.

To say that I understood it all is not quite true. My understanding of the marriage of sound and sight is not sufficiently developed to comprehend more than about three-fourths. But without doubt it's a great experience for every music lover. Never has there been such sound. The final "Ave Maria" enveloped you with melody such as only the angels have heard heretofore. You realize that this man who only wants to create beauty—while the rest of the world is tearing itself apart—should be hailed from the mountain tops.

Director Bill Keighley's course at U. S. C. has become so popular and so many schools have asked for it that he's having the lectures put into a textbook for the various colleges.

Wait until you get a flash at Rosemary Lane's New York clothes. Before she left for the Big Town, she used to be a strictly collegiate and sports girl, but now she's got her sisters swooning.

"Buck Privates" may not get four bells, but Abbott and Costello will have you laughing your head off.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Feb. 6.

DISCORD: Two years ago Gabriel Pascal—the only man to whom George Bernard Shaw will entrust the job of adapting his stories for the screen—planned a London production of "The Doctor's Dilemma," with Toscanini conducting the orchestra in Beethoven's Second during the death scene. Toscanini was amenable, but the war disrupted these plans. The impatient Shaw summoned Pascal and demanded: "What's happened to that production? Where's Toscanini?" . . . "The maestro can't come," the producer explained, "because of the war" . . . "War! war!" Shaw raged. "I'm here, am I not? The idea! I don't want to hear any more about him" . . . Last month a theatrical magazine invited Shaw to write an article about Toscanini. Shaw, still indignant because of the maestro's refusal to come to England in wartime, cabled: "No. He's a snob!"

LYONS

GREETINGS: John Emery telephoned his wife, Tallulah Bankhead, who has been touring in "The Little Foxes." She revealed that she had sent Christmas cables to Winston Churchill and Lord Beaverbrook and that they had replied in acknowledgment . . . "Why'd you do that?" Emery asked. "With all the work they have to do, did you have to start an exchange of greetings?" . . . "I sent one to the President, also," Tallulah confessed. "With all the work Churchill and Beaverbrook have to do, you'd think he at least would have answered."

ᔓᔕ

CHATTER: Al Jolson took his doctor with him to Palm Beach to safeguard his defense of illness in the suit brought against him by his coproducer for Al's having closed the show . . . Tilly Losch has completed arrangements to return to England in April . . . Paul Whiteman is writing his autobiography in Florida . . . Arthur Kober is writing a song, using the title of his new book, "Bella, Bella, Got a Fella" . . . Tommy Corcoran will not leave the Government service and will join the Little Cabinet . . . Sigrid Undset, the Nobel Prize winner, now is a permanent resident of Brooklyn, which has a large Norwegian colony.

ᔓᔕ

PRICE: The story is being told of Count Ciano visiting an auto salesroom in Rome and admiring the most luxurious car there. He asked: "How much for this one?" and the proprietor insisted upon presenting it to him . . . "Oh, no, "Ciano protested. "I want to pay" . . . "Very well, then, I'll make it nominal," the proprietor agreed. "The price is One Dollar" . . . "Okay," said Ciano. "I'll take two."

ᔓᔕ

SAVING: Gene Autry, the cowboy star, once worked for an independent film company which completed a movie in less than a week. This was accomplished by shooting the scenes only once, with no retakes, by using only a single set and by compelling all the employes to do extra services . . . "I had the same horse in those days," said Autry, patting the faithful animal, "a right smart horse. He can add and subtract, too" . . . "Did your bosses know that?" Gene was asked . . . "Hell, no," he answered. "They'd have made him work nights in the bookkeeping department."

CONFLICT: Ernest Hemingway and Martha Gellhorn, who left last week to report the war in the Orient, were very eager to return to covering the battlefront. The first time they had such a dual assignment was during the war in Spain. They were with the Loyalists in Tortosa, which had to be evacuated, and the enemy troops were the Fascist legions of Rome . . . The Spaniards abandoned the town, leaving only one empty train, 12 civilians who couldn't be moved, and Hemingway and Gellhorn . . . The correspondents waited in the deserted town for the Fascists' arrival. They walked in the empty streets, waiting. They sat in the empty bar, waiting . . . Five days later the Fascists ventured into town—and the press in Rome announced the glorious capture of Tortosa, after a five-day battle against the huge Loyalist army which held it.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 6, (INS).—One of the best reporters that ever lived was Floyd Gibbons—and one of the finest men. I covered many a story with him during my early days in New York. Floyd's life reads like fiction. He lost one eye in the World War and it was characteristic of him that he never let it affect his courage or his work. Up to the moment of his death he appeared on the radio talking faster than anyone I ever heard. He also wrote authoritative articles on world affairs.

PARSONS

I can't think of any theme more fitting than to portray a a sympathetic story of Gibbon's life such as Pat O'Brien has in mind. Such a story "The Life of Floyd Gibbons" has been written by Quentin Reynolds and Louis Sobol, two able newspapermen.

From a most reliable source I hear that Metro did not take up their option of Katie Hepburn, due 30 days after the release of "Philadelphia Story," in spite of the fact that she was such a sensation. The contract contained conditions that were said to be prohibitive. Katie wanted to set the date when a picture would be made so that she would be entirely free to take a stage engagement if the right one came along. Metro felt that other stars would demand the same privileges.

I am greatly intrigued with the description sent me by Max Fleischer of "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," the first cartoon to tell a story. Fleischer has spent over a year making these drawings which are neither fable nor fantasy but the story of a town of insects 45 inches from Broadway who are menaced by steel, cement and the human race. Fleischer's idea is a radical departure from anything yet done in the cartoon world. Human beings appear only as heavies.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Charles Corrells (Andy, of Amos and Andy) have another date with the stork; Somerset Maugham, noted British author, has checked in the Beverly Hills Hotel; Johnny Weissmuller, looking very sad and lonely, staging it at Charlie Foy's night club; now it's Al Vanderbilt Virginia Fields is seeing these pleasant evenings. Meanwhile George Raft is dating Betty Grable; talk is that Ginny may get herself a contract at Warners, She is a good actress and no matter who she steps out with she still talks about Richard Greene and insists he is the one; Joey Ray and Gwenn Kenyon are keeping the telephones busy.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Col. Lindbergh, Sen. Glass Spar Over Aid Bill

By the Associated Press

One of the most dramatic episodes in the lease-lend fight was a polite battle of wits yesterday between Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, opponent of the British Aid Bill and foe of war, and 83-year-old Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who would like to "shoot hell" out of the Nazis.

After hours of testimony, Glass took up the questioning of Lindbergh with the tart observation:

"The prospect is now that we'll be invaded and captured before we get through talking about it."

He complained that Lindbergh seemed to believe that the security of the United States depended solely on aviation, but Lindbergh said it would be "fatal" to go into war without other well-equipped defense branches.

Concerning Lindbergh's stand for an immediate negotiated peace, Glass asked what assurances there were that Hitler would keep such a peace. Lindbergh said he wanted the United States to rely on its defensive strength, not on Hitler's promise.

Finances played a great part in war, didn't they, Glass asked at another point. Lindbergh replied that financial friends had told him ten years ago that Japan, Italy and Germany would collapse, adding that Germany seemed to have found a way of waging war without money.

"Germany can't continue to fight without money," Glass observed.

"I give way to you on financial questions," the witness replied, "but the danger seems obvious regardless of finances."

Glass recalled that President Roosevelt had said repeatedly he wanted to do nothing "to cause our boys to be sent abroad" and asked: "Do you think he's going to change his mind?"

"That is possible," the witness answered.

"Yes, I know it is," Glass drawled, amid laughter from the spectators.

Hearst, INS Ask $500,000 In Libel Suit

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 6.—William Randolph Hearst and International News Service filed suit for libel today against Friday, Inc., for $500,000 damages. Friday, Inc., is a company which publishes the magazine Unbelievable, the last copy of which, the suit alleges, published propaganda used by the Communists for seven years against Hearst, namely, that he or International News Service received a financial subsidy from the Nazi regime.

J. V. Connolly, president of International News Service, said today:

"About eight years ago during the height of Mr. Hearst's campaign against the Communists, the Bronx Reds distributed a circular to the effect that Hitler had bribed Mr. Hearst. It was repeated in Communist papers and magazines and in some books written by Communists. We paid no attention to these attacks until it finally appeared in the New York Evening Post, which upon examination of our books, made a complete retraction. Its appearance, however, in a recent copy of Liberty Magazine and in the magazine Unbelievable made us decide to expose this false propaganda in court, particularly because a new version of it was picked up by the late Ambassador William E. Dodd, who wrote it in his diary which was published in Liberty Magazine."

Fulton Oursler, editor of Liberty, said that after Hearst pointed out to him the falsity of the report he made an investigation which convinced him that Dodd was misinformed and that the statement in his diary was erroneous.

Legal action against Liberty was dropped, but a suit against Friday, Inc., was filed today.

Partial Text of Lindbergh's Statement

A partial text of the statement by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on the British aid bill follows:

In the hope that it will save time and add to clarity, I have attempted to outline briefly my reasons for opposition t othis bill. In general, I have two. I oppose it, first, because I believe it is a step away from the system of government in which most of us in this country believe. Secondly, I oppose it because I think it represents a policy which will weaken rather than strengthen our Nation.

The first point is simply my opinion as an American citizen. The second is closely connected with the development of aviation as a factor in modern warfare. It is this second point, if you will permit me, that I would like to discuss. . . .

And here I would like to say that I have never taken the stand that it makes no difference to us who wins this war in Europe. It does make a difference to us, a great difference. But I do not believe that it is either possible or desirable for us in America to control the outcome of European wars. When I am asked which side I would like to have win, it would be very easy for me to say "the English." But, gentlemen, an English victory, if it were possible at all, would necessitate years of war and an invasion of the continent of Europe. I believe this would create prostration, famine, and disease in Europe—and probably in America—such as the whole world has never experienced before. This is why I say that I prefer a negotiated peace to a complete victory by either side.

Futilely Prolong War

This bill is obviously the most recent step in a policy which attemps to obtain security for America by controlling internal conditions in Europe. The policy of depleting our own forces to aid England is based upon the assumption that England will win this war. Personally, I do not believe that England is in a position to win the war. If she does not win, or unless our aid is used in negotiating a better peace than could otherwise be obtained, we will be responsible for futilely prolonging the war and adding to the bloodshed and devastation in Europe, particularly among the democracies. In that case, the only advantage we can obtain by our action lies in whatever additional time we obtain to prepare ourselves for defense. But instead of consolidating our own defensive position in America, we are sending a large portion of our armament production abroad. In the case of aviation, for instance, we have sent most of it, yet our own air forces are in deplorable condition for lack of modern equipment. The majority of the planes we now have are obsolescent on the standards of modern warfare. . . .

During the study I made of European aviation in 1936, 1937 and 1938, I was forced to the conclusion that Germany was the natural air power of Europe, just as England is the natural sea power . . . I concluded that the United States was the only Nation in the world capable of equalling or excelling Germany in aviation. But . . . it was obvious to me that Germany had a lead in military aviation which could not be overcome in less than several years . . .

At the present moment, Germany controls air bases on the continent of Europe which extend almost in a semicircle around the British Isles. From these bases she can converge upon the relatively centralized industry and aviation establishments of England . . . I cite the ease with which London can be bombed, in comparison to the difficulty involved in bombing Berlin. And in addition to Germany's advantage geographically, she has the additional asset of a much stronger air force and far greater aircraft manufacturing facilities than exist in England . . .

With this picture of Europe in mind, I now return to my statement that, from the standpoint of aviation, the attempt to gain supremacy of the air in Europe weakens our security in America. If we follow the policy represented by this bill, we will find ourselves with England as a bridgehead in Europe; and, one might say, with the American neck stretched clear across the Atlantic Ocean. If we establish such a bridgehead we must make every effort to maintain it. In that, as I say, I do not see how we can be successful . . .

It is also essential to take into consideration the fact that we have another island bridgehead in the Philippines; so that if we follow out the policy represented by this bill, we will have to maintain and protect supply lines which stretch two-thirds of the way around the earth, and which end in positions exposed to attack by the most powerful nations of both Europe and Asia.

This would be an audacious undertaking even if our nation were fully prepared for war. But we are not prepared for war, and the attempt to hold control of island positions off the coasts of Europe and Asia, at the same time, would necessitate depleting even the small defense forces that we now have, as the terms of this bill clearly show . . .

I do not believe that the danger to America lies in an invasion from abroad. I believe it lies here at home in our own midst, and that it is exemplified by the terms of this bill—the placing of our security in the success of foreign armies, and the removal of power from the representatives of the people in our own land.

Writer Explains Her Death-Mask Visit in House

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Margaret Russell, 34-year-old "pamphleteer" who was ousted from the House of Representatives for interrupting debate on the lease-lend bill yesterday by donning a death mask and robe and shouting "Victory will be mine," explained the whole thing today.

"I would have explained in Washington," she said, "but they put me in jail and let me go only on my promise to leave town immediately.

"You see, I represented death. So when the Congressmen got to debating about whether Germany or Britain would win, I just slipped on my costume and shouted 'Victory will be mine!' Get it?"

Then, she said, there was a hubbub with police and others crowding around and voices all over demanding her arrest.

"The policeman told me I was awfully lucky not to have been slugged over the head," she said.

Unfinished Buildings Slow Arrivals at Fort Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Feb. 6.—With more than 1,000 troops of the Twenty-ninth Division now in camp, arrivals here were virtually halted today for an indefinite time.

Except for a thin trickle of Guardsmen, assigned to Meade for special training and to learn the Army's new classification system, no more will be sent from their homes until the camp is ready for their regiments. When that will be could not be answered in official quarters here.

The barracks and mess halls will not be ready for occupancy by the entire division before March 1, said Maj. James A. Noxon, constructing quartermaster, bearing out a prediction of The Washington Post of last December. He added that even then the post laundry and other utilities would not be ready, nor would the Herculean task of conditioning the roads be started.

Hospital Incomplete

As originally laid out, the camp was to have accommodated about 13,600 at the outset. However, today's strength showed the division mustering 803 officers and 8,997 men, or more than 4,000 less than first estimates. It was considered probable that the smaller size of the organization might permit it to occupy the camp earlier than the first of next month.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, has said repeatedly that he would have no units brought here until hospital facilities are ready for them. It was learned from Lieut. Col. Dwight H. Mohr, of Baltimore, Division Surgeon, that except for heating equipment, the hospital would now be 50 per cent complete.

Installation of this equipment, which depends mainly upon receipt of certain furnace parts and employment of sufficient sheet metal workers to place furnaces and vents, would make 500 beds available. On the basis of beds for 2 per cent of the force, the entire division at its present strength could move in.

More Arrive

When the three combat brigades, the District 121st Engineers and remaining elements of the special troops will be called here depends upon imponderables which the division staff is endeavoring to reduce to ascertainable fact. In a day or two, it was hoped, some estimate of dates might be possible.

Troops arriving today included the Danville, Va., and Norfolk companies of the 104th Medical Regiment, commanded by Col. Mohr; Headquarters Company of the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, commanded by Capt. Earl Lutz, of Richmond, and Headquarters Company of the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, of Baltimore. Brig. Gen. George M. Alexander, of Lynchburg, Va., commanding the Eighty-eighth Infantry Brigade, is expected to arrive tomorrow, with his Headquarters Company from Richmond and Brigade Headquarters Company from Berryville, Va.

Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, of Norfolk, commanding the Artillery Brigade, said today he would hold a formal review of the 110th Field Artillery, Maryland National Guards, at Pikesville Saturday morning. The 111th Field Artillery, Virginia, and the 176th Field Artillery, Pennsylvania, would be reviewed after their arrival here, he said.

News of Capital Night Clubs

With Mary Harris

A SUCCESSFUL SONG RAID on New York has just been accomplished by Mayflower's Bonnie Boyd who's back in town with an armful of Manhattan's brightest new numbers and a headful of ideas. Bonnie toured the town at high pressure pace, gleaned suggestions from such experts as Vernon Duke, composer of "April in Paris" and the "Cabin in the Sky" score. Maestro Dick Kuhn of the Astor. (Bonnie sang with the Astor's Dick Kuhn before she joined the Mayflower's Dick Koons.) Among Bonnie's treasure trove are a new swing rumba, "In Chi Chi Castenango;" the clowning "Hello, Ma, I Done It Again;" "Who Am I?", specialty of Adelaide Moffett at the Copacabana; Artie Shaw's new "Would You Like To Be the Love of My Life" that Washington heard first in "Second Chorus" at the Capitol Theater; and "Isn't That Just Like Love?" . . . Engagement of young Maestro Dick Koons of the Mayflower Lounge to "Deanie" Robinson is the culmination of a strictly hotel romance. "Deanie" is secretary for the Mayflower's apartment manager, E. R. Hammer. Probabilities are that they'll be married on February 22.

Pete Macias and his Lounge Rivera Orchestra will emigrate to the Mayflower for one evening on Lincoln's birthday to play for the Republican dance while Sidney of the Mayflower will play for the preceding G. O. P. dinner. The dual event is the Republican equivalent of the Democratic Jackson Day Dinner. Joe Cochran and his band will fill in for Pete's Orchestra on the big evening.

MILT. THE MIGHTY MITE. Milt Herth, head Herthquaker of the Neptune Room, isn't a big fellow nor the bulgy-muscled type, but it's been mathematically figured out that one evening of his strenuous organ pumping in Neptune is the equivalent of a nine-mile hike. That makes Milt a leading "boogie-woogie" athlete. Mr. Herth attains his highest speed going nowhere but in a musical way when he churns out melody using his feet only, keeping his paddle-paws high in the air. He travels so fast on his "foot notes" that he'd leave an Olympic runner limp.

YOUNG GODFATHER. Matt Windsor's newly arrived bundle of boy is still too young to realize it, but Poppa Matt, of the Anchor Room, has chosen Paul Young, owner of the Rumanian Inn, as his godfather.

REQUESTS A LA NUTS. Mteronome Room patrons sign the strangest names to the request cards they send up to Band Leader Ray Heatherton. Scanning a bunch of these pasteboards we find that Michael (Mickey?) Finn wanted to hear "Temptation," that "Jeanie W. T. L. B. Hair" lives down at T. B., Md. (and we thought she'd been buried!), that "Toscanini" yearned for "I Hear a Rhapsody," that "Napoleon" wanted to hear "Josephine."

Frazier, psychoanalyst of Cafe Caprice, says there are three basic types of women,—the born old maid, the one-man woman and the, ah,—the Hedy Lamarr type. But that the only sort of woman to avoid is the kind with "expensive noses."

CURRENT DILLERS. That half-Harlem version of "Down Argentine Way" that Paul Kain and his cohorts are tossing around Mayfair. Sammy Ferro simulates the clavelitos on his drums, gets so distracted that he occasionally takes a smack at purely imaginary objects . . . "McNamara's Band," a perfect humpty-dumpty as boiled up by Jimmy Summerville's Four M's in Hi Hat. The drums, slide trombone and sax all go off the deep end together. In case you don't know, "McNamara's Band" describes the meeting of a band leader and the Duke of Windsor. . . . That new version of "Marie" that's being given out gigantically by Parley Eaton and Jim Fitzpatrick in the Rainbow Room. Parley and Jim give good ol' "Marie" a real face-lifting.

REUNION ON SUNDAY. Between Leo Tass headwaitering at La Salle Versailles in the evenings and Mrs. Toss managing a beauty shop, the Toss family sees little of eac hother, though happily married. They make up for it on Sundays by always dancing at the Madrillon.

IMPORTED WINES of the most expensive type are more in demand now than a few months ago when they were decidedly lower in price says Mrs. Helen Hamilton, owner of the Troika. Despite dizzying prices the Troika has recently stocked heavily on sparkling burgundy and champagne from abroad. The Troika's gilded customers seem to think that the more it costs, the better it tastes. . . . An almost countryside place where you'll find the finest wine is the Silver Fox. Proprietor Fred Johansen is a wine connoisseur, has filled his cellars with discrimination.

The Three Sophisticates (those pretties who act like a bunch of Tomboy Taylors) will return to the Shoreham next week. If he can get down from Canada, there'll also be a distinguished new singer. Can't tell you his name for fear there'll be a disappointment.

INDOOR PANORMAS. Cosmos Room patrons armed with lists of Carmen Cavallaro's recordings for request customers . . . Captain Nick Hope of El Patio taking all hands on a joyful accordioning "Trip Around the World! . . . Vern Wilcox astounding Lotus ringsiders with her impersonation of "Mr. O'Hara of Philadelphia" after he'd had two, or three, or four. . . . Blondely attractive Missus Burt (Burt's Trans-Lux) crocheting the first square of an afgran that she intends to finish in time for next fall's football games. . . . Casino Royal patrons going into hysterics over Jack (Jive) Schafer's sadistic account of how pussy fell into the well. . . . The appreciative hush in Ciro's Famous Village as Mrs. Alfred Pazoska, wife of the Mayflower's banquet manager, volunteered a song. She was a noted prima donna in her native Vienna. . . . The hum of delight as visitors first view the interior of Peter Fritz's Log Cabin out Silver Spring way. You can look around for an hour and always see something new and ingenious in decorations.

MUSICAL MARVELS. The father of the piano-ing boys at Restaurant "823" was both teaching and studying music at the ripe age of 14. . . . Maestro Bert Bernath of Pall Mall recently played Chinese music at a concert, using a special transcription made by Ida Hoyt Chamberlain. There are only five notes in the Chinese scale.

Note to the girls. If you see a goodlooking young man driving a doggy new blue car, it's possible that it will be Leader Redd Raffell of the Nightingale.

How One Woman Lost 20 Pounds of FAT

Lost { Her Double Chin, Her Prominent Hips, Her Sluggishness

Gained { In Attractiveness, A Shapely Figure

When your bowels and kidneys fail to perform their work correctly your system cannot throw off the waste materials and digestion often becomes deranged—you lose energy and activity. Perhaps before you realize it you're losing your appeal and getting objectionably fat.

Take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of water every morning half an hour before breakfast, cut out pastry, fatty meats—and go light on white bread, potatoes, butter and cream. In three weeks get on the scales and see how many pounds of fat have vanished; notice also that you have gained in energy—your skin seems clearer and eyes brighter—you feel younger in body and keener in mind.

Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts (a famous English formula) plain or new effervescent—sparkling—pleasant, at leading druggists everywhere; lasts 4 weeks and is inexpensive. Money back if not fully satisfied.

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

By Tony Suess
Twenty Years With the Union Printers

SUESS

Back in the days before Washington had expanded and Florida Avenue was the boundary line, amateur baseball was the thriving sport of the city. There were many teams playing then and one of the outstanding was the Atlantics, including such stars as the Handiboe brothers, the Salbe boys and Arthur Noyes.

The Radfords played at Second and R Streets Northwest and had a team that gave a good account of itself. "Reds" Herring and Bill Torney were prominent performers. There were plenty of diamonds (or lots as we called them) to accommodate all the teams and the crowds usually outdrew the big league team.

"Dude" Gates was the chattiest catcher at that time, and the fans derived a lot of amusement listening to his banter. Norman Kraft, the old Postoffice catcher, was another who could talk the batter to swing on a bad pitch.

A few years later the city had about 10 well organized leagues composed of such teams as Norris Peters, on which "Shorty" Hughes and Capt. Jenkins were stars. Twinings, with Joe Engle, Joe Giebel and a few other schoolboys, the names of whom I can't recall offhand, played at McDevitt's Field, which is now Lincoln Road and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. The Manhattans, managed by Jimmy Donnelly, were also members of the Independence League.

At the old "Active" at Sixth and D Streets Northeast, the Church League held forth—Rube Clark and Clyde Richardson were the star pitchers. Later the league moved to Thirteenth and D Streets Northeast, and the Ninth Street Christian Church team was the "tops." Clint and Tom Quantrelle, Ben Bryant, the Broome boys, and "Six-Six" Brewer, starred along with "Old" Pop Kerper and it was seldom that the team didn't finish on top. The playing field was one city block and crowds encircled the diamond every evening.

Sectional rivalry was at its peak about that time, too. The Mercurys of Southwest, the Shamrocks and Mohawks of Southeast, the Knickerbockers of Georgetown, along with the Rex Athletic Club of Northeast had some "hot" games and large crowds. Sunday ball, as a rule, was their forte.

Here I want to mention some of the "sweet" players of the time. Jack Spaulding and Harry Zannelli were outstanding shortstops; Walter Beall, who later joined the Yankees, was a pitching star and one of the best I have seen; Finney Kelly, Lefty Kuhnert, Lefty Kagle, Larry Nops, and "Chief" Greene, also pitchers, along with Pierce Riddle, Skeets Hayes, Inky Davis, Monk Fraser, Monk Walters, Johnny Bleier, and Henry Hiser—they all had their share in stimulating amateur baseball in a city that had some of the best athletes in the country.

The Capital City League, playing at First and M Streets, was composed of some of the strongest teams in the city (at least I think so), and the games between the Cornell and Aloysius nines were well worth going miles to see. The Marquette League, holding forth in Georgetown Hollow, also had its stars. In fact, there wasn't a league that didn't have some prominent players.

In the Central League, First and M Streets Northeast, the Sherwoods, G. P. O., and Union Printers usually were fighting it out for the league lead. One of the prime movers encouraging amateur baseball later was Clark Griffith, then manager of the Senators, or Nats, as we know them now.

In 1912, Griff, with the assistance of President Bob Young, of the Amateur Commission, staged "Amateur Day" at league park. Prizes of $150, $100 and $50 for the best dressed teams were awarded. The Printers, with their mascot "rigged out" as a "printers' devil," won first prize. American Security was second and Adams Express third. For some reason the interest in "Amateur Day" died down and its has never again been renewed.

The newspapers also did their part in putting the game on a high plane, devoting columns to box scores and comment.

The International Union Printers League is the oldest amateur league in existence. It was organized in 1908, the outcome of an intercity series between New York and Boston printers a couple of years before. Harry Wood, a New York typo, had vision enough to see what it would amount to. The league at first included eight teams—New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. Eligibility of the players was very strict, the teams to be composed of union printers and second-year apprentices.

Washington Typos didn't do so well in the early days of the game but in 1913 had capable performers enough to supply the "punch" to win the championship. Johnny Luitich was manager. The World War interfered with play for two years.

After the war the league resumed action (1920 to be exact), and for a couple of years the Washingtonians stood by and saw the pennant go to other cities. Along about that time the Typesetters were getting some promising players and in 1922 started to click under the guidance of Heine Webb. The team, which was composed of all union printers, included Lemerise, Ford, Hood, Lowry, Hutchinson, Warren, Desper and Feldman, with several others were a hard combination to beat.

The first championship to be won under Webb proved the team to be the smoothest fielding and hardest hitting aggregation in the league as attested by the fact that it made 44 runs on 58 hits in a four-game series. One error was all that was chalked up against the Typos in 51 chances, and the fielding of the team at times bordered on the sensational.

For five consecutive years the Printers won the championship, a feat at that time that has never been duplicated and they are still giving a good account of themselves to this day.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 6.—Billy Soose lays his first golden egg tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden, where a fair congregation is expected to watch him pit his deft boxing skill against the brute punching force of a citizen named Ernie Vigh.

CONSIDINE

He'll earn perhaps $8,000 for, at most, 30 minutes of averting Vigh's splats and for peppering this same Vigh with some of the most artistic if not sadistic boxing in the world. The $8,000 will be the most he has ever made from a fight. It won't be a bad night's pay for a fellow who less than a year ago was ready to quit the boxing game because he wasn't making any money. In the interim he won over the weight decisions from both claimants of the championship in this most confusing division of boxing, as well as got his chance to appear in the Garden. Now Mike Jacobs, who decides who gets in the Garden and who stays out, is all in favor of him. Says he will develop into a great drawing card. That's money in the bank for the good-looking, erudite young fighter from Penn State.

Vigh's only chance of knocking Soose out of his future golden eggs lies in the possibility that he will poke Soose on the chin with a couple of the winging punches which have flattened most of Vigh's lower-case opponents in the early rounds. The gamblers say the odds are 8½ to 5, in Soose's favor, which is another way of saying that short-enders will be betting 5 to 8½ that Vigh knocks him out. There is no other way Vigh can win against this post-graduate boxer.

Soose takes a good punch. He has been on the deck, but he knows the way up, and may have to demonstrate it tomorrow night if Vigh lands. But nobody has been hitting Soose on the jaw lately. Billy has too much respect for the feeling of his manager, Paul Moss, who was born with a curiously sympathetic nature, for a fight manager. Paul passed out cold the night Pirrone knocked Billy kicking. He was was out for two minutes, but Billy got up at the count of seven and was slapping Pirrone silly when Ray Arcel, the harried trainer, revived the stricken manager.

The fight tomorrow night is Billy's last until he meets Ken Overlin, the world's middleweight champion of New York, at the Garden in April. They were scheduled to fight for Ken's end of the 160-pound championship next month, but their Garden date was usurped by the Buddy Baer-Tony Galento match. Ancil Hoffman, keeper of the Baers, insisted on the date for Buddy before he would agree to let Max fight Lou Nova this coming spring.

If Billy can get past Overlin again and then past Tony Zale, the N. B. A.'s middleweight champ (he beat Zale easily in an overweight match) he should have a long and prosperous reign as champ. He is young, shrewd, takes excellent care of himself and should soon be gathering the fruit of his decision to go coldly and scientifically into boxing, instead of into one of the trades for which his college work fitted him.

Gen. Robert E. Eichelberger, superintendent of the United States military academy, must have suffered much when that woeful Army team was taking its licking this past season. "We've got the greatest athletic equipment in the world at West Point," he moaned to a fellow officer, "and we can't win a game."

Georgetown Defeats Colgate, 39 to 36

Hoyas Edge New Yorkers; Fawcett Stars

Maroons Lose by Three Points After Lead Changes Many Times in Contest

By the Associated Press

Hamilton, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Colgate pressed Georgetown all the way tonight but in the end the Hoyas had enough to edge out a 39-36 victory over the Maroon.

The lead changed half a dozen times but Georgetown finally pulled ahead in the second half and managed to stay there despite the great all-around play of Colgate's greatest basketball player in a decade—Hank Fawcett.

Although Hank "blew" two sleeper shots he still was the outstanding player on the floor. He scored 16 points and at all times he was stealing balls, intercepting passes or dribbling in and out of his larger opponents.

Too Many Hoya Players

Georgetown had too many good basketball players for Colgate. Had it been a game played by only five men, Colgate might have won, but Elmer Ripley, the Hoya coach, kept sending in players, resting others and keeping fresh men available for the blitzkrieg.

Colgate enjoyed a 13-9 lead midway in the first half despite some missed baskets and general loose play. Pajak and Engles got hot at this point, Pajak looping in two long shots and Engles counting in a follow under the basket. Fawcett had his moments then for Colgate, but his efforts alone weren't enough and by the time the half was over the Hoyas were ahead, 20-18.

Colgate Goes Ahead

With seven minutes played in the second half Georgetown had moved ahead, 26-23, but Colgate finally caught up and went in front, 32-31, with eight minutes left in the game. Dave Buck whipped in a goal to put the Maroon in front. Kiernan made it even when he cashed in on a foul and Georgetown went ahead when Giebel finally looped a long one. Colgate didn't catch up after that, despite the sensational playing of Fawcett.

With five minutes to go, Georgetown was in front, 37-35, after Buck made the last Colgate 2-pointer. Taft sank a foul for Colgate to make it 37-36, but then Bill Bornheimer broke loose and tossed one over his head to give Georgetown the final 3-point lead.

In a wild scramble at the end neither team scored, although Colgate had two chances which were missed.

Nearly 2,000 persons, the largest crowd of the winter, witnessed the game.

Rev. Newman In 'Golf Heaven,' Scores Two Aces

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 6.—The Rev. Robert Newman, of East Tawas, Mich., who rarely breaks 100, scored holes-in-one on two successive days.

He got the first one yesterday using a No. 6 iron on a 120-yard hole. The ball hit the cup on the fly. He was playing with the Rev. Lee Hoover, of Monroe, Mich., and the Rev. Terrence Kelly, of Detroit.

He got his second hole-in-one today on a 170-yard hole, using a spoon. He was playing against the same opponents and the Rev. George McDace, of Detroit.

Grace Amory Meets Bauer In Golf Finals

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 6 (AP).—Socialite Grace Amory played superbly on the greens today to defeat surprising Jane Crum, of Orangeburg, S. C., 3 and 2, and gain the finals of the Palm Beach Women's golf tournament.

Miss Crum, who upset Medalist Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., yesterday, played the Palm Beach girl fairly even off the tee and almost matched Miss Amory's steady iron game.

But the 19-year-old University of South Carolina junior could not compete with Miss Amory in putting and lost three holes of the first nine by using three putts on each.

Miss Amory went out in 40 against Miss Crum's 44 and showed about the same margin on the remaining seven holes.

Jean Bauer, winner of the tourney in 1939, defeated Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, 2 and 1, to capture the place in the finals against Miss Amory.

Both were out in 41's, but Miss Gardner's erratic driving and several spectacular recoveries by Miss Bauer finally gave the Providence, R. I., girl her victory.

Miss Amory lost in the finals last year to Miss Hicks, after defeating Miss Bauer, 3 and 1, in the semi-finals.

They will remain at temporary training quarters at Carlsbad until February 24, when they will move to Anaheim. Meanwhile, another squad of infielders and outfielders will leave Philadelphia for Anaheim February 21.

Extra: A New Kind of Strike—at a Race Track

Eagles, Boston Tie, 3-3, After Overtime

D. C. Hockey Club Moves Into League Tie For First Place With Baltimore; Courteau Plays Brilliantly for Locals

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Mass., Feb. 6.—The Washington Eagles moved into a first-place tie with Baltimore Orioles in the torrid Eastern Amateur League hockey race tonight when they came from behind in the third period to deadlock the Boston Olympic sextet, 3-3, in an overtime contest before 8,222 rabid fans in the Boston Garden.

Prior to the skirmish the Baltimore Orioles held a 1-point lead over the Eagles by dint of their shutout victory over the New York Rovers Wednesday night. Thus the point the Eagles receive for their stalemate with the Olympics puts the Washington club on even terms with Baltimore in the title race.

The Eagles held a 1-0 lead for the first 15 minutes of the opening period, and it was little Gordie Hemming, at the nets for Eagles, who turned back the Olympics time after time with his spectacular work. The Bostonians broke through Hemmings, however, at 15:28 and locked the count at 1-all when Dave Walsh, former Dartmouth College star, smashed one past Hemming after taking a short relay from John Fitzgerald, who had carried the puck from around the back of the Washington goal. Hemming, who drew a round of applause from the huge crowd for a fine save on Spain, was credited with fourteen saves when the well-played period was ended.

Dewey Opens

A clever play by the veteran Hal Dewey gave Washington a short-lived lead after nine minutes of furious action. Vic Polich came up with a nice save on Gordon Pranschke, but the rubber caromed off his pads and Dewey, who was near the mouth of the cage, slammed it cleanly by Polich. For the most part of the period play was clean and void of roughness, no players being sentenced to the penalty pew.

A 10-minute intermission was called with five minutes remaining in the game, when Vic Polich was struck on the chin by a sizzling shot off the stick of Norm Burns. Polich resumed play after receiving five stitches in his chin and received a tremendous applause from the throng.

At the time of Polich's injury the

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 6.—The University of Virginia's cage team downed a fighting but outclassed quint from the University of Maryland tonight, 47 to 18. It was the Old Liners' fourteenth straight defeat.

The entire Virginia lineup hit the basket for points before Maryland scored. The Cavaliers held a 25-to-9 edge at the half.

Although Bill Harman sank only 3 floor shots for the Cavaliers, he made good on 6 free throws for a total of 12 points, boosting his aggregate for the season to 226.

Billy McCann, Cavalier guard, dominated floor play with four field goals. Gene Ochsenreiter, Maryland's high scoring forward, was held to one field goal.

Soose Battles Vigh Tonight; Aims at Overlin

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—The slugger and the boxer renew their old feud in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, with a shot at Ken Overlin's world middleweight championship going to the winner.

The "Fancy Dan," Billy Soose, is 5-to-8 favorite in the betting to outgallop the sock specialist. Ernie Vigh, in the ten-round tussle, despite the fact Ernie has flattened 36 of the 52 rivals he has faced in 2½ years as a professional.

Although the "glamour boy" from Penn State College appears to know too many of the answers for the "Joe Palooka-ish"-looking blond from Newburgh, N. Y., this corner goes to the underdog this time, picking Vigh to win, largely because of the caliber of his heavy artillery.

Soose Beat Overlin Once

Promoter Mike Jacobs estimates some 12,000 customers will let him count a gross gate of $25,000 to $30,000.

Soose has been chasing Overlin for quite some time. He already holds an overweight decision over the former sailor boy, a decision he was awarded at Scranton, Pa., last summer, on the merits of which "experts" at ringside were divided. He also has outpointed the National Boxing Association's world champion, Tony Zale, of Chicago. Overlin is recognized in New York, California, Pennsylvania and several way points.

Several weeks ago, Billy bowed into the Garden and took a close verdict over young Tami Mauriello, who had neither the experience nor the sleep-producing talent of Vigh. On the same card, the up-State slugger made such a hit trouncing Coley Welch, of Maine, that tomorrow's tussle was arranged. The winner is almost certain to get a crack at Overlin in March, although the "champ" insists he will take most of the percentage if it's Soose, because of what happened in Scranton. Overlin insists he "wuz robbed" there.

1,500 Men Involved in Walkout

Battle of Three Handlers Apparently Started Trouble; Track Still Open

By International News Service

Santa Anita, Calif., Feb. 6.—The entire race program for today at Santa Anita was called off because of a strike involving 1,500 grooms and stablehands who protested against three of their colleagues being banned from the track.

Dr. Charles S. Strub, general manager of the track, said tonight that pending an arbitration conference between grooms and stewards and representatives of the State Racing Board the track will have its regular program tomorrow.

The program was cancelled at 2:20 p. m. just as the horses were scheduled to go to the post for the first race.

Attempt Vain

Presiding Steward Carleton F. Burke called a mass meeting of grooms and handlers in a vain attempt to get the grooms to go ahead with the day's program and settle the matter later.

The strike was precipitated by a fight among five stable workers last Sunday in front of the barns of the Circle S Stable, owned by George W. Stratton.

The trouble centered over the suspension of Groom Jerry Reynolds, who was alleged by Turf Club officials to have been involved in the fight. Grooms declared Reynolds was the "wrong man" and rallied to support him. The strike resulted when officials refused to reinstate Reynolds.

Stewards, upon hearing of the fight, started an investigation. It was learned that 40 grooms, or "ginnies," had lost their jobs since the meeting began. Santa Anita officials issued a statement in which the management denied responsibility for the strike.

"The grooms attempted to dictate conditions under which racing could be resumed," the statement read. "We believe there are enough dictators in the world today."

The board of directors of the Los Angeles Turf Club said that cancellation of the today's racing program was made at a "great financial loss to assure the safety of the fine horses in the stable area and to protect law-abiding men."

Turf Club officials said no union controversy was involved.

Personal War

"The grooms involved are employed by the owners and it was a personal fight between two small groups who swore out warrants for each other. The Arcadia police made arrests and until such a time as the guilt or innocence of the parties involved is proven it is deemed necessary to deny them the privileges of the race track area."

The committee of the grooms said that the strike would continue until track officials reinstate grooms barred from the track. The committee also asked that groom and exercise boys be given a "substantial guarantee' of $10 for winning horses, admittance to the grandstand during races and the right to try grooms whose "character and actions are obnoxious to racing officials."

Harder Signs, Cuts Tribe Holdout to 6

The righthander accepted terms after several conferences with Vice President C. C. Slapnicka over bonus clauses. He won 12 and lost 11 last season.

Harder's acceptance cut the list of unsigned Cleveland players to six—Catcher Rollie Hemsley, First Baseman Hal Trotsky, Pitchers Al Milnar and Ken Jungels and Outfielders Roy Weatherly and Jeff Heath.

Deaf Basketball Teams to Open Brewer Bill Sunday at Riverside

Baltimore and D. C. Silents to Play Preliminary Game

A new brand of basketball competition will be introduced at Riverside Stadium Sunday night when the Washington and Baltimore Silent Fives clash in a 7:30 o'clock preliminary to the American Basketball League feature involving the Washington Brewers and Baltimore Clippers at 8:45 o'clock.

The Brewers tonight are to invade Baltimore for a game with the Clippers prior to returning to Riverside for their Sunday night game with the Baltimore American League entry.

The local and Baltimore Silents are comprised almost exclusively of former college and scholastic basketball stars. The winner of Sunday night's game is to meet the New York Silent Five for the Eastern championship of the deaf and dumb amateur clubs.

Leonard Downes, formerly a great athlete and for three years captain of the Maryland School for the Deaf five at Frederick, Md., will captain the local Silents, who are comprised mainly of former Gallaudet and Kendall School players. Eugene Clements, Jack Montgomery, Edwin Angelgau and Jack Wurdemann, four of the greatest athletes ever turned out by Gallaudet College, are numbered among the District Silents.

And how do the Silent fives follow the game?

In the case of the District Silents, Downes, who can hear, signals the players when the whistle blows. Also the players watch closely the referee's gestures and seldom fail to detect his meaning when he calls fouls, out of bounds or time outs.

D. C. Eagles Tangle With All-Star Ice Aggregation Tonight

Full House May Witness Big Battle

Ceryance May Win 'Most Valuable' Award; 7 Orioles On Stellar Squad

A team with the individual stars of three teams will be the Washington Eagles' opposition tonight in the first big-time hockey all-star game played here. A capacity house of 4,500 fans is expected to be in the stands at Riverside Stadium when action begins at 8:30.

Baltimore, River Vale and New York clubs in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League will contribute foes for the Eagles, and the sextet will be coached during successive periods by the coaches of each team represented—Pick Hines, Jack McKinnon and Alex Smith.

Want Big Score

The All Stars, to a man, will be out to defeat the Eagles as decisively as possible and emphasized as much in their selection of talent which finds seven Baltimore players; three from New York and four from River Vale competing. Atlantic City and Boston will not be represented because they are playing one another in a league game.

Hines, who has made seven of his best players available for tonight's game, yesterday predicted that Frank Ceryance, Baltimore's great goalie, will win the most valuable player trophy to be awarded the All Star player so designated by S. G. Leoffler, sr., owner of the Eagles. The D. C. Hockey Writers Association is to make a 17-inch cup trophy award to the Eagle player similarly cited as most valuable. A vote will be taken among the Ice Hockey Writers and the presentation will be made immediately after tonight's game.

Baltimore's players who will compete tonight are Ceryance, goal; Bill Mass and Jack Dyte, defensemen; George Grigor and Chick Webster, centers, and Ned Vitarelli and Jack Riley, wingmen. Julian Sawchuck, defense, and Imer Kreller and Frank Dottem, wings, are to represent New York, and Bill McGregor, center; Hugh Bell and Swede Mattson, wings, and Eddie May, defense, River Vale.

Goalie Needs Rest

"My goalie, Ceryance, is badly in need of a rest," Hines cited, "but this is an All-Star game and I intend following through from our end. Ned Vitarelli, our midget winngman, is another who can stand a layoff, but who also will be in there.

"This, in my opinion, is one of the finest all-star teams ever boasted in Eastern League competition. I frankly hope it gives the Eagles fits."

The line-ups:

Eagles	Position.	All-Stars.
Hemming	Goal	Ceryance(B)
Rosenthal	R.W.	Kreller(NY)
Germain	L.W.	Vitarelli(B)
Courtain	Center	McGregor(RV)
Burton	R.D.	Dyte(B)
Knight	L.D.	Sawchuck (NY)

Subs: Eagles—McTeer, McCurry, McBride, Franschke, Mailley, Burns, Dewey, MacKeith. All-Stars—Moe (B), May (RV), Grigor (B), C. Webster (B), Dotten (NY), Mattson (RV), Bell (RV), Kreller (NY).

Typewriter Beats Adam's

United Typewriter cagers continued to pace the D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League last night as a 39-28 victory was registered over Adam Hats in the feature of play at Tech gym. Reds Auerback, who tallied 11 points, and Ollie Tipton paced the attack of the winners.

In other clashes on the same floor Nebraska A. C. nosed out St. Martin's, 37-32, and Maritime Commission defeated Delaware & Hudson, 37-27.

Games at Roosevelt gym saw McLean smash General Tire, 30-14 Bellman Fuel take a close one over Washington Flour, 27-25, and General Accounting Office nip Jewish Community Center, 15-14. At Central Railroad Retirement beat back Agriculture, 35-33; Herbie's trounced Treasury, 45-18, and Mount Vernon ran up a 61-15 margin over Cavaliers.

The closest battle at Eastern found Call Radio taking a 21-20 edge on Ballards. In other games Arlington Macabees smashed Bowie Thoroughbreds, 47-35, and P. O. Mailing beat Briggs A. C., 44-12.

Haight Goes South

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

I'm going to try to make this one informative. At least 95 per cent of the palm trees in the Miami area were transplanted when almost full grown. A very few grew from coconuts or shoots at their present positions. There are palm farms. If you want a palm tree, phone, and one up to your specifications as to kind, size, curve and age will be delivered by truck and planted. The coconut palm is not native to Florida. The original trees were imported from Cuba by a group of men who planned to make a fortune raising coconuts but the venture fell through. I'm told that coconut trees grow wild on the east coast of Florida, but are difficult to raise on the west coast. The highest land, not man made, between Miami and Key West is only 22 feet above sea level.

HAIGHT

Fifty-two hotels were built within the last year at Miami Beach, the majority mighty expensive jobs. Many of them are having a tough time operating at the prices they ask. I understand several managers are so lonesome that they get together at night and play poker using expensive mattresses for chips. Many of these hotels are built with walls right to the ocean, thus taking the beach for their guests. Perhaps half of the beach has gone commercial in this way. Even the natives are beginning to wail about it. Some hotels keep open all summer. The Miamians move over from the other side of the causeway. They pay $2.50 a day for a room that costs $25 a day during the winter season.

Colorful enough by day, Miami sparkles at night as the result of old man Neon's work. With one exception all the islands in Biscayne Bay are man made. Due to the shallowness of the water it is easy to make an island. Just build a wall around the design you choose and then pump the bottom of the bay into it. But you must own the land under the water. If you don't, ownership of the island goes to the United States. At the Deering estate just south of Miami, a channel was dredged to the dock. The material removed from the bay was piled up and formed several islands. Heirs of the estate claimed them but Uncle Sam won in the courts. These islands are sometimes good investments. One privately-owned island just off the mouth of the Miami River was purchased some 20 years ago for $3,000 and later sold for $100,000. Miamians still shake their heads whenever talk of completing the big ship canal across Florida is mentioned. There are streams of fresh water under the State and some contend that the canal might turn these into salt water.

They make no bones about bookmaking around here. The bookies have been closed down now, but even the papers say that they will be allowed to reopen when the racing at Hialeah and Tropical ends. In some years, Hialeah has been the only track able to keep the booking establishments closed. Although police raided Slapsie Maxie's Night Club and closed the gambling tables, four other places were allowed to operate full blast. Two of these were "raided" the other night, however, after the Slapsie Maxie people got out warrants.

Although there is much interest in citrus fruit around here, one of the big topics is, "How many lemons are on the left side of the slot machines?" Incidentally, slot machines were ruled out by a referendum vote here, but they are popping up again. However, almost every store in the city has an automatic dice game right out in the open on the counter. In addition, punch boards are in operation almost everywhere. In some of the downtown stores these dice games (something on the order of chuck-aluck) are so busy that one man does nothing but take care of the play. I don't mean they are in back rooms, either. In some cases almost on the pavement.

One prominent night club-gambling joint refers to the casino as the place where there's "a girl in the fishbowl." It even advertises about it. We had dinner there one night and watched the expressions of the faces of visiting school teachers when they came out of the gambling room after looking in vain for the "girl in the fishbowl."

The Miami Jail is located on the top floor of the City Hall, the highest structure between here and Jacksonville. In other words, the prisoners have a penthouse. Must be a nice feeling to be up there in a hurricane.

By Al Hailey

Table tennis, it develops, brightens the smile, sweetens the disposition, helps your figure, lends poise and makes for good health in general.

At least this is the belief of the District's first lady of table tennis, 15-year-old Caroline Wilson, who has just won the United States Table Tennis Association's Eastern Division championship.

Miss Wilson, a student at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, is the first Washingtonian to ever win the Eastern title, and she appears destined to become the first Washingtonian ever to win the national title when table tennis experts from all over the United States meet in New York in the annual spring tournament.

Path Ahead Clear

If you want to get a view of Miss Wilson in action you can catch her at almost any of the newsreels showing this week in the downtown theaters. A person-to-person picture is much better, however.

Caroline, who only started playing ping pong—pardon us, table tennis—just three years ago, is a small person—5-feet-2, in fact, and she's a walking advertisement for the good that you can get out of the table tennis habit.

Although she was the youngest person in the Eastern tournament by quite a few years, Miss Wilson is quite modest about her victory—she gives all the credit to her discoverer, Morris Bassford, and the instructor who taught her all she knows about the game, Stanley Fields.

But to see Miss Wilson in action on the table set up in the basement of her home is to be convinced that she was a natural anyway.

She's a defensive player, and that's how she defeated Priscilla Woodbury, of Worcester, Mass., in the women's finals in straight sets, 21—14, 21—15, and 21—10, last Sunday.

Miss Woodbury, who is 19, is a driver, Caroline's father, Harry L. Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, explains. Caroline's counter-strokes, the forehand and backhand drive and chop, merely "wore down" the play of her opponent.

Miss Wilson won every tournament she participated in during the past year—including the Maryland State championship and the California State title. What's more, she teamed up with Bobby Bensinger in the mixed doubles last year in Baltimore and won the Maryland State title in that division.

When in Pasadena last August, Caroline won the California title and then took a jaunt up to Long Beach to win the city singles and mixed doubles championships there.

Quick Eye Helped

Caroline was first noticed by Bassford, president of the District of Columbia Table Tennis Association, who remarked to her father that she had an unusually quick eye. What followed was tutelage at the hands of Fields, District champion, and then two trophies in her first year of competition, 1938.

Miss Wilson, who now plays about twice a week for practice—not including the games at her home, 6801 Forty-sixth Street, in Chevy Chase, Md—thinks she'd like to be a physical education instructor when she's through with college.

Table tennis is not her only talent, however, for she also plays the piano. As for the future, the main thing occupying her mind right now is winning that national crown in New York.

Riders, Tech Favored in Games Tonight

With its first public school basketball beating in two years still rankling, Roosevelt High five tonight attempts to prove a 45-37 setback by Western two weeks ago was all a mistake when it tangles with Woodrow Wilson in the feature end of a double-header at Tech Gym. The opener, at 7:30, brings together the host club and Anacostia.

Though Wilson has turned in several fine efforts to date, Roosevelt appears an easy winner tonight. Its full complement of veterans should have little difficulty with a Wilson five that can boast only one. And against the Tigers' record of one victory and three losses in interhigh play, Roosevelt claims one with the figures reversed.

Anacostia also appears the underdog in its battle with Tech, thus leaving the possibility that the series will be minus two contenders tomorrow. A loss for either the Indians or Wilson will drop them from even a mathematical chance to gain the title play-off.

Ten other games are on the schoolboy card for the day, highlighted by the return engagement between Eastern and Gonzaga. The game, at Eastern at 3:30, gives the Tide a chance to avenge a 2-point loss in an earlier meeting.

Other afternoon action finds National Training School playing at Mount Rainier, St. Alban's at Coolidge, Devitt at Western, Woodward Prep at Franklin Day (Baltimore), and St. John's at Washington-Lee. In night clashes Montgomery Blair meets Fairfax on the latter's court, Rockville is entertained by Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Central moves to Alexandria for a game with George Washington High.

Green Hornet Scores Again In Wrestling

Finding Warren Bockwinkle a bit stubborn, the Green Hornet was forced to use three, instead of one, "body bends" to win his fifth straight wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night.

With 1,800 fans looking on, the pair of rivals did almost as much groaning outside the ring as inside before the newest masked marvel put an end to the business. It took 33 minutes.

Preliminary hostilities were featured by the victory of Rudy Dusek, the dependable, over Paul Boesch in 17 minutes. Other matches went to Lou Plummer over Joe DeValteau in 18 minutes; Milo Steinborn over Red Brill in six minutes, and Fred Grobmeir over Dick Stahl in 15 minutes.

Pin Marks Fall Thick and Fast At Recreation

Maurine Morrison was the leading lady in the Utility Girls' League at New Recreation last night with her record-breaking game of 144 and set of 344 which helped her Megawatts quintet to team records for the season of 509 and 1,408. Despite these highs, however, the Megawatts could take but two contests from the Circuits while the Dynamos whipped the Live Wires in all three.

NORTHEAST TEMPLE

A bowler in the Friends' Association League, Wilfred Nixon, uncorked a high game of 171 last night which featured nine straight marks. Two weeks ago it was Hyman Barr, of the same league, who had a 190 game to his credit. Nixon's game last night helped his Cubs team win team set with 1,622, which was a season record. He also had top set of 381. The Redskins, not to be outdone, set a new high for team game with 598.

BROOKLAND RECREATION

QUEEN PIN

Cotton, of Our Lady of Victory, paced the Section "D" Catholic lads with a 136 game and 372 set. St Peter's No. 1 were best for team highs, rolling 558 and 1,639 to lead. Henry Kaboskey's 131-351 and Bauer's 134-348 helped the St. Peter's boys come through. Rykoskey's 127 and 361 were near highs.

ICE PALACE

The most important upset in the Connecticut Avenue Ladies' League was the three-game loss of the league-leading Orioles to the fast-charging Cardinals with the help of Edith Elliott's 318 set. The Cardinals found the drives to their liking and won team honors with a 478 game and 1,370 set. Alice Beall, Eagles, was the best for high game with a 124 count.

ARCADIA

Jennie Malcolm, Agriculture, and Ruth McClintic, Interior, were the individual stars of the Ladies' Federal play, the former with top game of 148, while the latter led with her 352 set. RFC No. 2 was the best team for high game, a 550 count winning for them, while 1,559 sticks took the set honor for the GPO girls.

Archibald Ordered Here A Week Early

Shortly after Max Waxman, manager of Harry Jeffra, had agreed to the shift from Uline Ice Arena to Turner's Arena for the Jeffra-Joey Archibald match for the New York State featherweight world's championship, came an announcement from the District Boxing Commission yesterday ordering Archibald to appear on the scene a week in advance of the 15-round bout, Tuesday, February 18.

Waxman followed in line with Al (Veskit) Weill, Archibald's pilot, yesterday afternoon after a conference in New York with Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, and thus the change from Uline to the Fourteenth Street Emporium with its new seating capacity of 3,000 became official.

With the New York Athletic Commission, through Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman, giving its blessings to the bout, and announcing that it would stand firmly behind the bout as for the world's championship, the District Boxing Commission took steps to make sure that Archibald, the former champion, would be in fine physical condition for the battle.

A wire was directed to Manager Weill yesterday, demanding that Archibald show up here for a physical examination next Tuesday.

"We want to make sure that Archibald has suffered no previous injuries, and therefore we want to protect both Joe Turner, the promoter, and the Washington public," Claude W. Owen, local commission chairman, stated yesterday.

Weill has assured the local promoters that Archibald will be here for a week of intensive training. He will drill at Huron gym, 511 Eleventh Street, in public, and may do a few public workouts at the arena, where he started his amazing streak of victories which now numbers 17.

Jeffra, Waxman stated, is training at Summit, N. J., where his stablemate, Red Burman, the heavyweight, trained for the championship bout with Joe Louis. Heinie Blaustein, trainer of four former world's champions from Baltimore, is handling the little titleholder.

American U. Host Tonight To Swarthmore

A freshman who saw his first collegiate basketball action Wednesday, and has been out for American University's team less than a week, tonight will highlight the Eagles' try for their fourth victory of the season in a meeting with Swarthmore. The game at A. U. gym will get under way at 8:15.

Tommy Simpson, youthful newcomer, will be Coach Staff Cassell's "ace up the sleeve" tonight. In his first game, against Randolph Macon, the speedy youngster scored eight points for second-high honors of the game. His assistance is expected to be highly important against the strong Swarthmore quintet.

Other starters for the locals will be Capt. Hugo Schulize and Bart Reese, guards; Carl Byham, center; and Jim Hollis and Archie Norford, forwards.

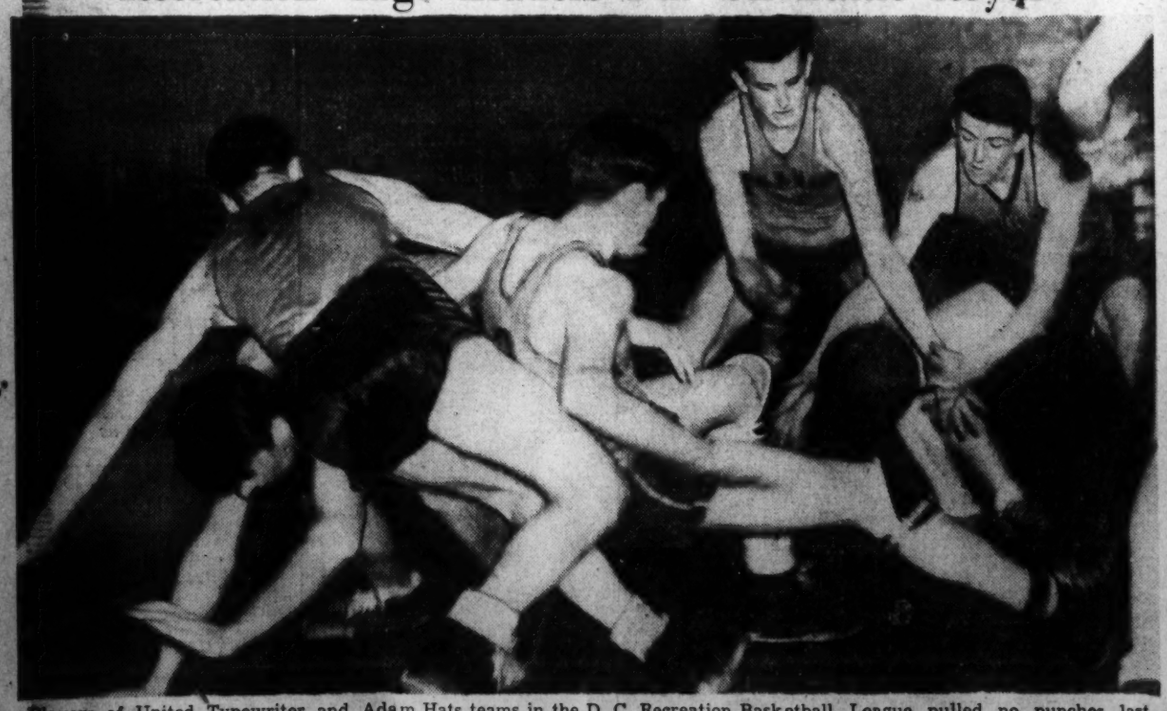
Capital Heights Plans Boys Club

A meeting will be held Monday night at 8 o'clock in the Capital Heights fire house to make final plans for the establishing of a club for boys and girls of that vicinity.

Congressman Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), of the Fifth Maryland District, will be the principal speaker. Mayor William Steele, of Capital Heights, will also speak.

Arrangements will include refreshments and entertainment. Johnny Bowen, former prize fighter of Washington, and better known as one of the "fighting Bowens," will direct the Boys Club activities.

Recreation Cage Leaders Put On Battle Royal



Players of United Typewriter and Adam Hats teams in the D. C. Recreation Basketball League pulled no punches last night as they came together at Tech gym. Ohio State Names Seven Young Aides for Grid Coach Brown

New Mentor Helps Pick Assistants

32-Year-Old Mentor From Massillon High Has Staff Ranging Down to 26 Years

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 6.—Football powerful Ohio State University placed its gridiron destinies today in a youthful coaching staff dominated by men fresh from high school ranks—and Head Coach Paul Brown declared "I rise or fall" on the selections.

Brown, whose precision-like Massillon (Ohio) scholastic teams won him national recognition and the Ohio State coaching position, said that he alone chose seven assistants hired by the university today and that "not one of them was forced upon me."

Aides Brought Up

Three of the seven, C. C. Widdoes, Hugh McGranahan and Fred Heisler, were Brown's chief aides at Massillon. The others are Trevor Rees, coach at East Cleveland (Ohio) Shaw High; Paul Bixler, assistant football and head basketball coach at Colgate, and Fritz Mackey and Eddie Blickle, holdovers from the former Ohio State coaching staff.

The 32-year-old Brown jumped from scholastic ranks to the college "big time" after Coach Francis A. Schmidt and entire staff resigned during an investigation of reported dissension among the staff members.

Heisler Only 26

Youngest member of the new staff is 26-year-old Heisler, who will assist 27-year-old Rees in coaching the freshmen. McGranahan, 39, is the oldest coach, Mackey is 37, Widdoes and Blickle 36 and Bixler 34.

Ohio State, in addition to employing one of the youngest coaching staffs in the country, became the first major school to take the majority of members (five out of eight) from high schools.

First practice sessions under the new regime will open February 24. Brown said he would maintain a varsity squad of 36 to 40 men and that the other football candidates would join a reserve squad until they earn varsity berths.

Gallaudet Nosed Out by Elizabethtown

The first quarter was a bit slow and ended with the Blues on the short end of a 13-11 score but at the half the score was 24-all.

The third quarter saw the real action. Both teams speeding up and down the court without a let-up and ended at 35-31 with E-Town ahead. In the fourth quarter occurred the only accident when Shirk collided with Weingold's elbow and had to be retired from the game. Raffensberger came to life in the last five minutes and dropped five shots through the hoop, cinching the game.

two teams were again tied 3-all, and in the remaining five minutes neither team could break the stalemate, thus necessitating an overtime session. The Olympics went into the lead, 3-2, for the first time early in the third period when Frankie Spain tallied on a pass from Paul Guibord at 3:54. But Courteau came back to score his second goal and again a tie resulted. Courteau flashed the red light on a pass from Pranschke, sending the disk high into the rigging of the Boston net at 8:33.

Colonials' Zunic Provides Club's Punch

Lanky George Washington Star Answer To Coach's Prayer; Leads District College Basketball in Scoring

The Mr. Big of basketball at George Washington University this year and one of the East's outstanding performers is lanky Matt Zunic, a 6-fot-3-inch operative with all of the power, speed and drive of a big, fast, spirited race horse. In short, Matthew is a coach's dream.

He throws 'em in from far and near and at the foul line he's a terror. In fact, he walks up to that foul line for twice as many shots as the average player, which is a story in itself. But more about that later.

Just now, Matt leads all collegiate scorers in the District area by a good margin with 144 points in 14 games. That's the neat average of exactly 10 per game. And the surprising fact is that 34 of these points have been scored on foul shots.

Last year, when this human dynamo, who has aptly been called George Washington's "mad man of the courts," made his appearance, Bill Reinhart was impressed with him on sight.

"If he can just harness his terrific drive and speed, he'll make quite a player," Bill said. For Matt is one of those tremendously aggressive, here - there - and-everywhere ball players who trails the ball around the court like a bird dog on the trail of quail.

Will Draw More Fouls

Naturally, in the process of trailing the ball, guarding his man and spearing rebounds, at which he is unusually adept, with such zeal and with unusually long arms and legs, Matt was certain to commit his share, and considerably more, of fouls. But this didn't bother Reinhart a whit.

"If you will just keep driving and cutting for that basket all the time when we've got the ball, you'll draw more fouls than you'll commit and you will probably worry the opposition to death," Reinhart told his young New Kensington, Pa., protege.

So Matt set out to do as he was told and last year as a sophomore he proved Reinhart was right. Thirty-four fouls were called on him, but he was awarded 50 shots and he caged 32 of these. In both respects he was far ahead of all of his teammates.

This year the system works even better. In 14 games he's been given 52 foul shots and he's cashed in on 34 of these. He's only been put out of two games on personal fouls. And so far 31 fouls have been called against him, which shows improvement over last season.

In addition, his sharp driving and cutting into the hoop have brought him 55 field goals, most of them scored just under the basket. His unusual aggressiveness generally nets a field goal or at least one, sometimes two, free throws. His opponents must foul him to stop him. Thus Reinhart accounts for the large number of foul shots Matt gets.

The fact that Zunic has drawn 52 charity shots is unusual when you examine carefully the figures on some of the other members of the Colonial squad. Joe Comer, for instance, the second leading G. W. scorer, has been awarded only 31 foul shots. And fleet little Bobby Gilham, another regular who has played in every game, has gone to the free-throw line for only 15 shots! With eight games still to be played, Zunic may hang up some kind of an all-time George Washington record for drawing fouls. At his present rate, he should draw something like 75 or 80 by the end of the season. And if he continues to sink 'em at his present pace the added 50 or 55 points should certainly aid the G. W. totals.

Deckard Meets Lash in 2-Mile Race at Penn

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 6.—Track and field headliners from all over the Nation went through their final workouts today for the fourth annual Penn A. C. games tomorrow night as experts picked most of last year's winners to repeat.

Outstanding feature of the games, at Philadelphia's Convention Hall, will be the John H. Neeson 2-mile, featuring Greg Rice, Notre Dame's world record holder, and Tommy Deckard, who won the event last year.

Chuck Fenske, who led the field in the Pennac mile last year, will defend his title against Walter Mehl, John Munski and Luigi Beccali, Italy's former Olympic champion.

Neither Deckard nor Fenske is picked to repeat but experts predict that a total of 10 of last year's 14 winners will successfully defend their titles.

Rubin Holds High Place In Cue Meet

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Art Rubin, New York, maintained his contending position among the leaders of the world three-cushion billiard tournament tonight by defeating Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, 50 to 44, in 57 innings for his ninth victory in 11 starts.

Rubin clicked off 11 billiards in the tenth frame to take a 24 to 4 lead over Denton, but the veteran almost overhauled the Easterner in a determined comeback. Rubin's run tied the high mark of 11 established earlier in the tournament by Jake Schaefer of Cleveland.

John Fitzpatrick, the Los Angeles expert who came within one billiard of beating Willie Hoppe last night, found his game stalled after taking a 28 to 14 lead over Earle Lookabaugh and lost to the Chicagoan, 50 to 48 in 46 innings.

Paul Lewin, Chicago ended his tournament play by defeating Irving Crane of Livonia, N. Y., 50 to 43, in 70 innings. Lewin has won eight games and lost nine.

Elkton Beaten In Close Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Elkton, Va., Feb. 6.—With the score tied at 22-all in the last minute of play, Shenandoah High School boys scored two goals in quick succession last night to defeat Elkton High School, 26 to 22, at Elkton.

Elkton had come from behind in the third quarter to tie the score and then march on to a 22-to-20 lead three minutes before the final whistle, only to have the lead taken away from them as Kite, Shenandoah guard, dropped in one to tie the score, and Short batted in a rebound to put Shenandoah in the lead.

Shenandoah girls defeated Elkton in a preliminary game, 11 to 8.

was like a kid on Christmas morning, the other day when he led a group of sportswriters through the labyrinths on the Point's tremendous sports layout. He had worked as backfield coach for Army from 1927 until the end of 1933, but everything is bigger and better at the Point now, from Dr. Roland Logan's intricate water-massage for tennis elbows to the enormous new fieldhouse into a corner of which Madison Square Garden could fit very comfortably.

As for the team, which got worse as its weapons improved, Blaik was noncommittal. Army of course is not going to lower its entrance requirements to get good football players. Nor will it permit Blaik to use the boys any longer, per diem, than other Army coaches. Three days a week Blaik can have his football playing cadets from ten minutes 'till 4 until 5:30. On Monday and Friday he can have them (after their marching drill) from 4:50 until 5:30. He can call no night drills.

But at heart he's optimistic. He doesn't think he'll ever have a national championship claimant at West Point, but he agrees with the general and every other man around the Officers' Club that the team must be better—particularly in these days when the public is turning toward the military ideal as something pretty terrific. Blaik's a good coach and has the old grads at West Point with him, which is a great help. He'll probably eradicate a lot of that ponderous power-type of football Army has been playing so long. He is alive to the sweeping changes in the game. He told us that the game has changed almost completely in mood and execution even in the last decade, and gives much of the credit for this to the taking of full movies of games.

He has seen a lot of football in his 43 years of life . . . first as a player at Miami U., of Ohio, then at West Point, then coaching a cavalry team in Texas, then as a fan and student of the game, after he resigned from the Army to go into business in 1923, then as an assistant at Wisconsin in 1926, and then at Army and Dartmouth. The two greatest backs he ever coached, he said, were Chris Cagle and Bob McLeod. His best tackle was Dave Camerer. When Blaik made that last assertion to the note-scribbling assemblage of reporters he looked up and laughed at the red-faced confusion of one reporter who had faithfully and automatically taken down words. The reporter was Camerer.

'Lost' Godoy Gets Ultimatum From Promoter Jacobs

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—Promoter Mike Jacobs today gave Arturo Godoy, Chilean heavyweight, until March 10 to appear in this country or forfeit his chance of meeting Champion Joe Louis in Los Angeles, April 15.

Since the fight was arranged several weeks ago no direct word has been received from Godoy. Even his manager, Al Weil, is wondering what has happened to his fighter.

Jacobs said a signed contract is on file with the California boxing commission and that if Godoy refuses to honor it, he will request the commission to suspend the Chilean.

"Tancy" Lee, British Fight Star, Is Killed

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—James "Tancy" Lee, 59, former holder of the British flyweight and featherweight boxing titles, died today of injuries received last night when knocked down by a bus in Leith.

Lee won his greatest fame in the ring in 1915 when he knocked out Jimmy Wilde in 17 rounds to win the flyweight title, and the Lonsdale belt. He continued in active competition until he was 45 years old.

Explorer Foes On Long Trip For Bouts Here

One of the lengthiest boxing trips to be made by any college team this season is currently being unreeled by Arkansas Tech's ring team, which meets Columbus University here tomorrow night.

In order to fight in two matches, the Techs are unspooling a little jaunt of 3,000 miles. Proceeding from Russellville, Ark., the team arrived in New Orelans last Saturday to fight a 4-4 draw with Loyola of the South.

From New Orleans the fighters will swing up to Washington, arriving today. And after they've finished their business with the Explorers tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, they'll get back on the train again for a long hard push back to Russellville.

No Pushover

Few folks around these parts know much about Arkansas Tech as an ahtletic college, but the fact that the boxing team was able to tie Loyola bespeaks its excellence. The New Orleans college generally comes up with one of the Nation's top teams.

Tech was State champion of Arkansas last year, and will be threatening a repeat this season . . . despite a loss of four lettermen to a recent mobilization of the Arkansas National Guard. But for that loss, the school was counting on its strongest team in history.

Particularly in the lightheavy division was Tech hard hit. The National Guard swiped both its outstanding 175-pounders, with the result that Tech was forced to forfeit to Loyola in that division. Neal Kinney, one of the departed light heavies, was supposed to be one of the best in the country.

Ferguson Only Vet

At present, there's only one letterman on the team—Jimmy Ferguson, who'll meet Bernie Jackson in the lightweight spot. Two red-heads, Tom Fulton, featherweight, and K. O. Donoho, middleweight, carry most of the team's color.

In Fulton's first collegiate match, he was knocked down five times, only to get up and put the chill on his opponent. Probably the feature of tomorrow's fights will be Fulton's collison with Louis Taub, Columbus' veteran 127-pounder. Donoho, a heavy puncher, will be paired with either Frank Cuddy or Max Coe.

Heinie Manush Wins Medal Honors in Baseball Golf Play

Lloyd Brown Second To Veteran; Ferrell Throws Clubs 13 Times

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 6.—Though he came down in the back at the halfway point and required emergency medical treatment before he could continue, the veteran Heinie Manush put together two good rounds of 72-73—145 to win medal honors in the qualifying round of the sixth annual baseball players golf tournament today, going away.

Heinie's nearest rival was Lloyd Brown, another old-timer now pitching for the Phillies, who sloshed around the Jungle Club course in a steady all-day rain in 76-74—150. From there the scores mounted all the way up to the 97-94—191 registered by little Pee-Wee Reese, of Brooklyn.

Manush, who now manages the Boston Red Sox farm at Greensboro, N. C., swung too hard right at the conclusion of his morning round and what should come loose but his sacro-iliac.

Returns to Course

Manush was rushed into town to a doctor. There the errant joint was snapped back into place, and Heinie lit another cigar and went on left-handing his way around the course. He shot the last nine in 34, a stroke under par.

Wes Ferrell, defending champion and three times former winner, broke two wood clubs and two irons in posting a 75, 76—151. Wes was not happy on the afternoon round and threw his clubs 13 times by actual count, getting slightly better distance with his woods than with his irons.

Tying Ferrell at 151 was Mervin Shea, the quiet Detroit coach, with rounds of 75—77. Gerald Walker, Clevelands' new outfielder, was all alone at 77, 75—152. Joe Medwick and Jack Russell tied at 153, while Jimmie Foxx, who is scheduled to have his regular salary argument tomorrow with Eddie Collins, general manager of the Red Sox, posted 74, 80—154.

WES FERRELL

Other 36-hole scores were Johnny Murphy, 156; Paul Derringer, 156; Paul Waner, 157; Rick Ferrell, 158; Roger Peckinpaugh, 158; Myril Hoag, 159; Al Simmons, 160; Whitey Witt, 164; Roy Cullenbine, 165; Burt Shotten, 165; Ted McGrew, 166; Tommy Bridges, 167; George Selkirk, 169; Leo Durocher, 169; Buich Henline, 171, and Milt Shoffner, 190.

Due to the limited size of the field, the championship flight was cut to 16.

Manush's opening opponent tomorrow is Johnny Murphy, the Yankees' great relief pitcher. Ferrell starts out against Al Simmons, who mashed a finger in a door last night. There will be two rounds of match play tomorrow.

Bolivar Takes Third Purse on Hialeah Park Turf Course

Stout Astride Woodward's 3-Year-Old,

Running as Choice, Winner Pays $6.90; Moja Is Second With Version Third

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 6.—William Woodward's Bolivar, a colt that couldn't get close in maiden company on the main track, continued his remarkable winning streak on the grass course when he defeated 11 other 3-year olds in the 1 1-16 miles of the Country Club Prado Purse here this afternoon. The son of Bosworth has started three times on the velvety turf and emerged the victor each time.

The dark bay son of Bosworth, a $4.90-for-$2 favorite, had to try harder this time, but Jimmy Stout brought him home with 1½ lengths to spare in 1:48 3-5. The lightly weighted Moja, from Cleaveland Putnam's barn, was a game-closing second, two lengths clear of M. A. Waldheim's Version.

As happens occasionally on the first turn of the turf course, several horses went very wide. Shim Sham ran almost to the outside fence before deciding to take the wide curve, but he was pulled up when his chances were ruined.

Bolivar broke on top, opened up daylight, and made Peep Show stop as they reached the final turn. Version and Moja rallied through the stretch. It was Moja's challenge that made Stout take no chances. The winner responded without being seriously menaced.

MISS SHOPPER was bothered by REMEMBERING shortly after the start, but raced well when clear. WADDY suffered no mishaps.

SWING LEADER, taken off the pace in the run down the backstretch, came around the leaders in the final quarter mile and finished with good courage to outlast BANKER JIM. The latter broke tardily, gradually improved his position while saving ground and would have won in a few more strides. PARFAIT AMOUR, prominent contender throughout, faltered through the stretch, yet outlasted CLASSIC BEAUTY. The latter, fastest away and showing good speed, hung in the final drive.

FELSUN, reserved off the pace to the stretch turn, where he saved much ground, took command with a rush and opened up a winning lead. CRIUS, lightly restrained in the early running, finished steadily to punishment, but could not reach the winner. WEDDING MORN also saved ground and closed stoutly. SAXONIAN finished well.

STAIRS, much the best, went around the field with a rush leaving the backstretch, opened up a long lead and won as her rider pleased. POLINA, under intermittent punishment the entire trip, held on gamely in the final drive. PLAUDAWAY, well up from the start, faltered in the stretch and just lasted for third place. SWEET SHOWNO, slow to get going, closed an immense gap to finish fastest of all.

SIR ELMER, not hurried in early stages, responded willingly when placed to drive after half and disposed of TONYPANDY to win while opening gap. SILENT WITNESS moved up menacingly and faltered in closing eighth.

Kayak II to Be Sent to Farm

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 6.—Kayak II, winner of the 1939 Santa Anita Handicap and second last year to his stablemate, Seabiscuit, will be sent to the breeding farm at Willits, in northern California, Owner Charles S. Howard said today.

Kayak was declared out of this year's $100,000 race because of a slightly bowed tendon. The Argentine 5-year-old will be given enough time for his injury to heal, then will be returned to racing.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

Marshall Cassidy, chairman of the Jockey's Disability Trust Fund, announced today that President John C. Clark on behalf of the Miami Jockey Club has contributed a sum sufficient to enable the trustees to insure all riders and exercise boys at Hialeah Park who may be injured in line of duty. Coverage was effective as of the first race today (Thursday) and contains the following provisions: $25 per week while incapacitated to the extent of one year. $1,000 for hospitalization and medical attention. $5,000 in the event of death to the next of kin. Exercise boys receive one-half of the above benefits. At a brief ceremony held prior to the first race today (Thursday) the riders assembled in front of the jockey quarters and were informed of the action taken by the Miami Jockey Club. Jockey Eddie Arcaro, second vice president of the Jockey Guild, in responding to the announcement stated: "Jockey Earl Dew, one of our guild members, is being buried this afternoon at Sac City, Iowa. No more fitting tribute could be paid to the memory of a fine friend and a great rider. We are appreciative of the splendid deed of the Miami Jockey Club in making a voluntary contribution to the trustees of the Jockey Trust Fund, which affords protection to the jockeys and exercise boys. Our families join with us in expressing our sincere gratitude to President John C. Clark and his associates." A. Ruiz, owner of the Dalia Stable, shipped Flying Breeze and Juanita to Havana. Elwood Sachsenmaier, owner of the good handicap performer, Roman Soldier, a few seasons back, is numbered among the Hialeah visitors. Raphael II, Joseph E. Widener's French importation and candidate for the $50,000 added Widener, worked a clever half mile over a track classified as good yesterday morning. The 4-year-old son of Rodosto stepped off the 4 furlongs in :35 1-5, :48 1-5. Greentree Stable's The Rhymer, $20,000 added Flamingo prospect, worked a mile in :50, 1:16 1-5 and 1:42 1-5. John M. Gaver, Greentree Stable conditioner, holds an eight-point lead over Jack Howard in the second 15-day Hialeah trainers' contest. Gaver has 30 points and Howard, Coldstream Stable trainer, 22. The second period ends Tuesday, February 11, for the $500 prize award. W. B. Finnegan, winner of the first 15-day prize, is down the list with six points. Gaver has saddled six winners and three seconds in the past ten days. Howard has sent out four winners and three seconds. BILL

First race—TRUE HEART has had several chances. Gets the outside post position for this and may run to works and take the main portion of the purse. GAL ANN will have Eads in the saddle and will be ready to do some running in her debut. BATTLE LARK for the show end.

Second race—ARCHED appears best suited for those gathered for this sprint. Has the speed and is reported ready for the best. ADOLF belongs with this kind and is dangerous. POSTERITY to take care of the others.

Third race—ROCK MAKER seems the best suited of this group. McCreary will do the booting and I see no reason for mistakes. CALORY is better than generally rated and should be a keen factor in this company. JOHN'S HEIR promises to be in the money circle.

Fourth race—AIR BRIGADE was third in fast company last out and deserves the call over a field of this brand. REMOTE CONTROL likes the route and should be prominent. COUPON may take the third position.

Fifth race—CLYDE TOLSON has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in this field. Winner of his last two, he seems capable of carrying the 120-pound assignment. Feather weight makes BOW LOW a possibility. FAIRFLAX was a surprise winner last out.

Sixth race—KANSAS CITY gets the call in this distance affair. Finished second last out and gets a modest assignment. CAVALIER'S closing ability makes him a threat. CHOPPY SEA may take a place in the cash circle.

Seventh race—CHIEF GAMBLE could be the right one in this rather open event. Races and trials indicate this one is going to score soon and this spot is about right. SNOW shied in the stretch and tossed off that last. STURDY DUKE may be prominent.

Eighth race—DIZZY B. seems to have something on these. The route and the weight appear right and I'm going to string along. KINGOO and MAHLETTE may fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—CLYDE TOLSON.

G.M.C.'s 1940 Earnings Net $195,500,000

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—General Motors Corporation, in a preliminary report on its 1940 earnings, showed net of approximately $195,500,000, an increase of about 7 per cent over 1939.

The company showed the increase in Federal taxes had cut heavily into its profits. It said earnings before deducting income and excess profits taxes were $92,500,000 above a year ago, but provision for higher taxes absorbed about $80,300,000 of these increased earnings.

The result was an indicated net total for stockholders only $12,209,778 above the 1939 total of $183,290,222. The net for last year amounted to $4.32 per common share, against $4.04 in 1939.

While the company did not make public figures for the final quarter of 1940, the preliminary net for the year, compared with a net for the first nine months of $129,172,490, indicated a fourth-quarter result of $66,327,510.

The 1940 result was evidently the best since 1937, when net came to $196,701,724. Had it not been for last year's higher taxes, it appeared the corporation's profits would have come close to its historic record of $276,468,108, cleared in 1928.

The preliminary figures issued today are subject to adjustments in the final audit. The complete report for 1940 will be issued later.

Irregularly Higher Trend Marks Timid Trade; Pivotal Issues Show Mild Rallying Mood

New York, Feb. 6.—Stock market favorites still were in a mild rallying mood today but many leaders failed to maintain the forward stride of Wednesday.

Active issues moved up and down by fractions throughout the session. There were a few wider advances at the close on small turnovers. The majority of pivotal stocks finished well under the best and minus signs were plentiful.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was ahead .2 of a point at 42.4. Of 684 individual issues traded, 340 were up, 154 down and 190 unchanged. Dealings were relatively slack throughout. Transfers amounted to 422,830 shares compared with 492,860 the day before.

Analysts were none too well pleased at the evident reluctance of the list to show more vigor on the extension of the upswing which had been attributed mainly to technical factors involved in the lengthy retreat. Business news was generally constructive but buying timidity still was blamed on war fears, tax doubts and nervousness over testimony being given before Congressional committees on the British-aid bill.

Rail stocks were not particularly responsive to a slightly more than seasonal increase in last week's freight loadings. Coppers were buoyed moderately by reports of larger demand for the metal. Expanding bank clearings, retail sales and steel production were viewed as cheerful.

General Motors, after the close, made public its preliminary earnings statement for 1940 showing $4.32 a common share against $4.04 in 1939. Heavy provisions for mounting taxes cut sharply into pre-share net for the corporation. Actually earnings topped last year by $92,500,000 but taxes took $80,300,000 from the increase. The stock on the day was up ¼ at 43¾. Chrysler was unchanged at 65½.

Allied Chemical and J. I. Case were up 2 each. Lesser improvement was recorded for United States Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, Anaconda, Kennecott, Paramount, Loft, New York Shipbuilding, General Electric and Consolidated Cigar.

Among losers were Bethlehem Steel, Republic, Western Union, Santa Fe, New York Central, Texas Corporation, Douglas Aircraft and Coca-Cola.

Commodities were a trifle uneven. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to off ⅛ of a cent a bushel and corn down ¼ to ⅜. Cotton gained 10 to 25 cents a bale. Stocks at London dipped.

Modest advances in the curb were retained by Bell Aircraft, Electric Bond & Share, Amerada Gas, Phoenix Securities and Universal Pictures. Volume here was around 77,000 shares versus 92,000 yesterday.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Actual business in cotton goods was on a moderate scale today but a strong undertone prevailed. The acute delivery situation continued to restrict new business and offerings of heavy goods where available found a ready response from buyers.

The question of deliveries also dominated wool fabrics. Clothing manufacturers were said to be experiencing difficulty in obtaining goods due to the virtual withdrawal of producer offerings at this time.

Rayon goods met an active demand at firm prices. Silk remained in the doldrums.

Advertising Spurs Sales Even in War, Briton Finds

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—Advertising increases sales even under war conditions, Cecil Chisholm, chairman and editorial director of Business Publications, Ltd., of London, said in "Printers Ink."

At the outset of the war, Chisholm said, the volume of newspaper advertising dropped about 50 per cent in the expectation London was to be bombed night and day from the very start.

"At the end of the first September not a single bomb had been dropped on London," Chisholm continued. "Business men drew breath again. Courage gradually returned—but that was only half of the reason for the return of the advertiser.

"Advertisers found that turnover dropped when advertising stopped; then they discovered that sales increased when advertising was renewed.

"By December the volume of press advertising had risen to over 70 per cent of the 1938 level. . . . This level was maintained until the blitzkrieg broke in May. The bombing quickly brought the volume another 10 per cent under even the crisis spring of 1938, although better than September 1939.

"Today (December 18 because of censorship delays) the volume of advertising is rather less than it was in September 1939."

Chisholm mentioned paper rationing, which cut use to about 30 per cent of normal, and the pegging of circulations in effect since July, as factors in advertising curtailment.

"Newspaper rates have risen considerably," he added. 'Special' position rates have rocketed."

Chisholm figured national and provincial newspapers and periodicals were probably earning around 55 to 60 per cent of their pre-war revenue. Hardest hit of all sections of the business was the poster industry.

Hudson Motor Workers File Strike Notice

The C. I. O.'s auto workers union yesterday filed a five-day notice of intent to strike at the Hudson Motor Car Co. plant at Detroit, shortly after the plant had begun work on building plane parts in the defense program.

Discrimination in dismissels was charged, dispatches from Lansing said. Arthur E. Rasb, chairman of the State labor mediation board said immediate efforts to prevent a tie-up would be made and that a 30-day "cooling off" period, possible under Michigan law, might be ordered.

Meanwhile in Washington representatives of 14 of the standard railway labor unions, stalled in efforts to win two weeks annual vacation with pay for railroad workers, decided to ask their 750,000 members to vote them authority to call a strike on the Nation's 150 Class I railroads.

Confers With Roosevelt

The decision on a strike vote was announced by George M. Harrison, railway labor leader, shortly after he conferred with President Roosevelt at the White House. The ballots will be in the hands of the workers by February 15, Harrison said, and 15 days will be permitted for voting.

Labor circles regarded the strike vote as a bargaining maneuver by the labor officials. They based this interpretation on the following facts:

A strike could not be called immediately, even if authorized, since the Railway Mediation Act provides for a 60-day waiting period after the first strike call is issued. Under the law the President appoints a fact-finding committee to investigate any such dispute. This committee has 30 days to make its report. A strike can not be legally called until 30 days after this committee has made its report to the President.

Strike List Compiled

On Capitol Hill, Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, made public a list of 127 strikes in defense industries during the last year compiled for the Senate Naval Committee by Secretary of Navy Knox.

Of the total, Knox reported, at least a part or temporary settlement had been effected in 100 while 27 still were in progress February 3.

"The net result of any stoppage is a permanent loss of production time," Knox said. "The Navy Department is most anxious that some means be found to escape the possibility of this loss."

On other labor fronts, the Associated Press reported these developments:

Seven thousand employes of the Allis-Chalmers Co. in Milwaukee, Wis., and 6,500 of the International Harvester Co. tractor plant at Chicago, remained out on strike, with no apparent progress made toward settlement of the disputes. Allis-Chalmers has some $40,000,000 in defense contracts.

A second strike in two weeks stopped production of freight cars by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. at Michigan City, Ind. An A. F. of L. union spokesman said the company refused to consider a grievance committee's demands.

At a La Crosse, Wis., rubber plant 800 C. I. O. unionists walked out yesterday contending the company had violated seniority rules.

DuPont Urges Excess Profit Tax Repeal

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Inc., suggested today the immediate removal of the Federal excess profits tax as an "obstacle to the development of new undertakings."

The company made public a portion of its forthcoming annual report to stockholders, which stated: "In the case of already established, successful industrial concerns . . . the incentive for risking saf liquid capital in new undertakings of uncertain success has been reduced by the present law to 38 cents on the dollar of profits these ventures may earn . . .

"This is said in no spirit of unreasoning complaint against heavy taxation. As matters now stand in the world, the national defense is of paramount importance and there must be no stinting of expenditudes necessary to place this country in an invulnerable position . . .

Must Avoid Needless Injury

"But it is of vital concern . . . to the future well-being of the country as a whole that the laws for raising necessary revenues for the Government shall be so designed as to avoid needless injury to our basic institutions. And, in particular, it is of crucial importance that the door not be closed to new undertakings . . .

"In the opinion of the company's management, the present excess profits tax law definitely tends to obstruct new industries; and the prospect of still further reduction of the incentive for risking capital in new ventures involves a most serious threat to the normal future increase of employment in industry.

Obstacle to Progress

"In the present press of insistent national demands, it is important that the Nation's legislative representatives, and the great body of responsible citizens behind them, should not overlook, or permit to be neglected, the vital necessity of keeping the way consistently open for the creative and self-replenishing forces of American industrial development. There should be no needless penalties upon progress.

"In the interest of continuing industrial advancement and of future employment, the present, evidently unintended obstacle to the development of new undertakings should be promptly removed."

Cotton, Rayon Consumption Soars in Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—Consumption of cotton, rayon and wool in the United States advanced rapidly in 1940 over 1939 but the use of silk and linen declined, the magazine Rayon Organon, published by the Textile Economics Bureau, reported today.

The Nation used 4,916,300,000 pounds of the five major fibers last year, establishing a new record for the industry and a mark 7½ per cent above the 4,557,500,000 pounds consumed in 1939.

Cotton accounted for 80 per cent of the entire consumption.

Concerning rayon, the journal commented: "Evidence of the growing importance of rayon in the American textile industry is illustrated by the fact that, for every pound of rayon consumed in 1940, there were consumed eight pounds of cotton, 5-6 of a pound of wool, 1-4 of a pound of silk and 1-28 of a pound of linen."

Cotton	3,964.4	3,629.7
Rayon	487.5	458.5
Wool	411.1	396.5
Silk	35.8	47.3
Linen	17.5	25.5

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Check transactions expanded sharply in the week ended February 5 to the largest in a month and topped the comparable 1940 week by a wide margin, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The latest total of $6,376,944,000, based on reports from 25 leading cities, was 17.3 per cent ahead of $5,436,249,000 a year ago and $827,425,000 above the previous week.

Westinghouse to Build Big Factory in W. Va.

Fairmont, W. Va., Feb. 6 (AP).—Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Co. of Pittsburgh is to build a $3,000,000 plant in Fairmont to fill lighting needs of new industrial plants in defense industry, Vice President David S. Youngholm announced today.

The plant will manufacture flourescent lamps and will employ between 800 and 1,000 men when operations start, Youngholm added.

Your Federal Income Tax

Gross, Net, Surtax Net Incomes

In computing a Federal income tax, the taxpayer is confronted with the problem of ascertaining, (1) his gross income, (2) his net income, and (3) his surtax net income. The instructions which accompany the forms clearly and explicitly set out how this is done. If, after reading them carefully, the taxpayer does not fully understand them, he should consult the nearest collector of internal revenue.

Gross income, generally, is all income derived in any taxable year from any source whatever, unless specifically exempt by law. In any usual business the gross income of the person operating it consists of the gross profits on sales, plus any income from investments and incidental or outside operations or sources. The income tax return must show the exact condition of the business—gross sales, purchases, and the cost of the goods sold, and the inventories at the beginning and end of each taxable year.

In the case of professional men—a lawyer, a physician, an architect, a surgeon, a dentist, a clergyman, a writer, or any other—the gross income must include all fees, salaries and compensation of any kind received for professional services.

Amounts received from the Commodity Credit Corporation shall, at the option of the taxpayer, be considered as income and shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which they were received. If the option was exercised for any taxable year which began in 1939, it shall be adhered to with respect to all subsequent taxable years unless the commissioner of internal revenue approves a change to a different method.

Net income is the gross income less the deductions allowed by law. The long-continued and varying experience of the Bureau of Internal Revenue shows that numerous errors are made by taxpayers in their income tax returns due to their failure to understand clearly what deductions from gross income and what credits against net income are allowable. The taxpayer, in his own interest, is urged to read over the instructions on the forms until he understands them, before he makes out his return. Legal deductions include business and professional expenses, such as salaries, pensions and bonuses to employes, taxes, losses, interest, bad debts, depreciation, depletion, contributions and similar items definitely set out in the instructions.

An earned income credit of 10 per cent of the earned net income, not in excess of 10 per cent of the net income, is allowed, in addition to the personal exemption and credit for dependents, if any, for the purpose of computing the normal tax.

Banks' Excess Reserves Drop $490,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Treasury borrowing cut lendable excess reserves of banks $490,000,000, to $6,310,000,000 in the week ended February 5.

During the week, the Treasury sold $630,000,000 worth of national defense notes.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended February 5 member bank reserve balances decreased $505,000,000. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of $434,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, $79,000,000 in money in circulation, and $12,000,000 in Treasury cash, and a decrease of $11,000,000 in reserve bank credit, offset in part by increases of $12,000,000 in gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, and a decrease of $15,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on February 5 were estimated to be approximately $6,310,000,000, a decrease of $490,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended February 5, 1941, were reported as follows:

Late Selling Erases Gains In Wheat List

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 6.—The wheat market's recovery of the week was extended about a cent at times today before price gains faded in the final hour.

Advancing as much as ⅝-1 cent at one stage to 83⅛ for May delivery and 77½ for July, wheat showed net gains from the recent lows of more than two cents. Final quotations, however, were unchanged to ¼ lower compared with yesterday, May 82⅜-¼, July 76⅝-½.

Buying was attributed largely to mills and dealers covering previous "short" sales but when these orders diminished prices sagged. Brokers said the buying was associated with Army flour purchases, reports of Oriental activity in the export flour market and trade interpretation that wheat and other agricultural products may be included under terms of the British aid bill.

Corn closed ¼-⅜ lower than yesterday, May 61⅝-¾, July 61⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye unchanged to ⅛ up; soybeans 1⅛-1⅜ lower and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Senate Committee Considers Home Guard for District

The Senate District Committee at its first meeting since the appointment of Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, as chairman yesterday decided to ascertain whether or not the Capital needs an antisabotage law or a home guard.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, who brought the matter to the attention of the committee, was directed by the chairman to confer informally with the Commissioners and report back at the next meeting.

"There could be a lot of sabotage here," Bridges remarked after Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, commented that Washington has no large industries.

Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, pointed out that the States might well look to the District for direction in the enactment of antisabotage laws and the creation of home guards. At the same time he added that the proximity of national armed units might make home guards unnecessary in Washington.

Authorized Last Year

After Senator Reynolds had reported briefly on the joint Senate-House traffic hearing Wednesday night, Senator Burton asked for advice of the Senate committee on conducting the traffic inquiry to which he was assigned.

"This problem doesn't gain by spot treatment," he said. "I would like to take this job on a long-range plan."

He explained that he wants time to correlate the findings and recommendations made during numerous traffic surveys of recent years before calling his subcommittee together.

"When we have reviewed what has been done before," he explained, "we can decide where to go from there."

Analyses Needed

Senator Burton said that the subcommittee might need from six months to a year to come to a conclusion regarding the traffic problems in Washington. Analyses of engineering, enforcement and public education are needed, he said.

Chairman Reynolds indorsed Burton's idea and commented that "trouble in the past has been that they've tried to do something too hastily."

Senator Holman expressed the hope that the subcommittee would stress the protection of school children in its recommendations.

To regulate election of District delegates to national political conventions, Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont.

To refund erroneously paid special assessments, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland.

To amend District credit union act and to provide for incorporation of credit unions (two bills), Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana.

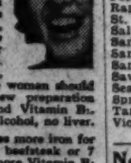
PALE, TIRED WOMEN

Supply the Blood and Nerves with Iron and Vitamin B1



Thousands of women and girls over 14 are not getting enough iron to make rich red blood, and not enough Vitamin B1 for proper functioning of the nerves.

When the iron lost each month is not replaced, these women often feel tired, cold, worn out. They have pale lips and pale cheeks. Their shortage of Vitamin B1 affects the nerves, dulls the appetite, and disturbs digestion. These women should try ENRICH, the tasty new preparation which supplies extra iron and Vitamin B1. No habit-forming drugs, no alcohol, no liver.

Each day's ENRICH furnishes more iron for the blood than 4 pounds of beefsteak or 7 pounds of spinach . . . And more Vitamin B1 than ½ pound of baker's yeast. Best of all, ENRICH tastes good and costs only a few cents daily.

When iron is restored to the blood and the body is fully supplied with Vitamin B1, it usually follows that good color comes back to the cheeks and lips, appetite returns, nerves function better, and you feel peppy again. We will refund your money unless one bottle of ENRICH satisfactorily helps you feel better, look better, eat better, and sleep better. Start now!

A reward for her many patriotic endeavors is to be given tonight to that Washington girl who made good not in one city but in hundreds of them.

That's radio star Kate Smith who, on her program over WJSV and the Columbia network at 8 p. m. is to be presented with the Flag Service Cross of the United States Flag Association. Col. James A. Moss, president-general of the flag association, will bestow the award on Miss Smith and at the same time make her an honorary member of the flag association.

In addition to her musical duties on the show and the acceptance of the award, Miss Smith is to take time to salute National Boy Scout Week, which is celebrating the thirty-first anniversary of the founding of the organization today.

Miss Smith also continues her patriotic activities tomorrow, for at 2:30 o'clock over WJSV and Columbia she's to take a prominent part in the broadcast called "Calling All Citizens." The program is being presented under the auspices of the Active Citizens League, composed of women prominent in public affairs and headed by Elizabeth Harrison Walker, daughter of President Benjamin Harrison.

Other speakers on the broadcast are Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt, Mrs. Wendell Willkie, Dorothy Straus, New York State Democratic committeewoman, and Mary H. Donlon, of the New York Republican State Committee.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ♠ K.

Here is the way the great chess master analyzed the bidding and play:

"The risk attendant on the bidding of North and South is slight. As South (Dr. Lasker) views it, North is likely to hold honors in hearts, diamonds and spades, and probably one honor in clubs. He is prepared and willing for his partner to play the hand in no trump at a game contract.

"With the unbid diamond suit, in which North had no stopper, he wisely bid only two no trump, but this South felt justified in raising to three.

"It is noteworthy that the heart ten and the diamond ten in the South hand are essential elements of strength. Were either of these cards adversely held, a game contract would have been very difficult of fulfillment; if indeed, it could have been made at all."

With North the declarer at three no trump, the play was extremely simple. East opened the king of spades, which held the trick. East then shifted to a heart, and the king in dummy won. Thereafter the defending players scored only the ace of spades and the ace of diamonds. North made three no trump with an extra trick.

Dr. Lasker's team won the match because the opponents with the North and South cards elected to play for five clubs rather than three no trump, and at that contract they had to give up two diamonds and a spade, being set on.

Col. Donovan Reported Barred From Syria by Vichy's Orders

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Turkey, Feb. 6—Col. William J. Donovan, the American observer who is traveling extensively in southeastern Europe and the Near East, has been prevented from traveling through Syria by express orders of the French government at Vichy, a reliable informant said today.

(The eventual position of the untested French army in Syria, like that in North and West Africa, is nebulous, but both Gen. Maxime Weygand in Africa and Gen. Henri Dentz in Syria have called upon soldiers and civilians to obey Chief of State Petain at Vichy, rather than be swayed by "Free French" appeals from London. Syria might become a battleground if Germany should try to strike at the Suez Canal through southeastern Europe and the Levant.)

Donovan, who now is in Jerusalem, left Ankara Monday night. He had a visa which would have enabled him to go through Syria to the Holy Land.

Just before he boarded the train, however, a French embassy official arrived at the station, it was reported, and announced that he had received a cable from Vichy which said that under no circumstances should Donovan be permitted to traverse Syria.

As a result, the colonel and his party hastily rearranged their schedule, went by train to Adana, in southern Turkey, and from there were flown to Palestine, via the British island of Cyprus, by Lord Forbes, assistant British air attache in Athens.

The plane avoided Syrian territory.

Cancellation of Donovan's visa appeared to reflect a new French policy, for, in recent months, the French have granted numerous visas to Americans in Turkey, including officials of the United States embassy.

Donovan had planned to spend only a day in Syria. He is accompanied on his trip by Commander Richard Tuggle, United States Naval Attache in Turkey, and the British Col. Sykes, who came with him from Athens.

Turkish newspapers have viewed Donovan's southeastern Europe tour as a means of bolstering Bulgarian and Yugoslav resistance to Axis pressure. They believed he expressed assurance in those countries that President Roosevelt would give the British all aid possible.

Tropic Troops To Get Yellow Fever Serum

Secretary of War Stimson yesterday announced that all soldiers assigned to duty in the Tropics will be inoculated against yellow fever, using a new serum developed by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Terming the action "another historic step" in the Army's war against disease, Stimson compared it with their work in proving that the disease was carried by mosquitos and in the introduction of vaccination against typhoid fever.

He said that strict sanitation methods in Panama had driven yellow fever from the Canal Zone, but that this would not protect soldiers assigned to the new Caribbean bases or who might be "wandering around large districts of South America."

Stimson also announced the appointment of four leading civil doctors to serve as an advisory board on influenza. The group, consisting of Dr. Francis G. Blake, of Yale University; Dr. Alphonse Dochez, of Columbia University; Dr. Ernest W. Goodpasture, of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. O. H. Perry Pepper, of the University of Pennsylvania, held its first meeting here yesterday.

Appointment of the board is a precautionary step, the Army chief said. So far, he declared, Army camps have been less affected by the flu than surrounding civil communities.

The yellow fever inoculation order affects all troops in tropical regions of the Western Hemisphere. Stimson said the disease has been spreading a little, but that compulsory use of the new serum should make all American soldiers immune.

Willkie Plane Reaches Guinea; Remarks Stir Nazi Contempt

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

By the Associated Press

Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, Feb. 6.—The Dixie Clipper, bearing Wendell L. Willkie, landed here at 3:48 p. m. (11:48 a. m., E. S. T.) today, completing the first leg of a pioneer flight over a new course between Lisbon and New York.

The plane left Lisbon last midnight and will start the second and longest hop of the course—3,120 miles—to British Trinidad tomorrow.

From there, the route goes to Puerto Rico; thence to New York, where Willkie is due some time Sunday.

(Pan-American officials in New York said the clipper would leave for Trinidad at noon (E. S. T.) tomorrow.)

Berlin Has Only Contempt

Berlin, Feb. 6 (AP).—Authorized German sources asserted today that utterances such as that by Wendell L. Willkie, released yesterday in London, should be received only with contempt.

(Willkie, in a statement broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation after his departure from London yesterday, said: "Tell the German people that we German-Americans reject and hate the aggression and lust for power of the present German government.")

The German government, the authorized sources said, did not pay much attention to Willkie's words, since he is a private citizen.

"Of one thing we are sure," they said, "Willkie would not have made this reference to his German extraction before election."

The authorized sources called Willkie "a past master at metamorphoses."

"It is a pity he didn't live in Ovid's time; he might have given the poet new inspiration," was one comment.

(Ovid, a Roman poet of 43 B. C.-17 A. D., is best known for his "Metamorphoses," a narrative poem recounting legends dealing with miraculous changes of shape.)

It was asserted that Willkie had behaved more English than American—"the British lords so impressed him."

Previously Berlin authorities expressed doubt that any number of Germans heard the Willkie broadcast in view of prevailing laws making listening to foreign stations subject to heavy penalties, including death in aggravated cases.

Appropriation to Be Sought For Social Worker's Salary

The District Commissioners will be asked soon to add to the city's budget a $4,000 item to pay the salary and expenses of Mrs. Florence Conlin, a social worker with a high batting average.

Mrs. Conlin works with the landlord-tenant branch of the municipal court in adjusting hundreds of disputes chiefly involving nonpayment of rent.

Mrs. Helen Dewey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association, a Community Chest agency which attempts to improve substandard housing conditions in Washington, yesterday disclosed Mrs. Conlin's score for December and January last year.

Out of 173 cases handled by Mrs. Conlin, 145 were adjusted by her. Contact with real estate agencies settled 59 of the disputes, advice to the tenant accounted for 53 more, 31 were handled through conference with lawyers and two were adjusted with consultation with the Legal Aid Bureau of the Community Chest.

Twelve of the tenants involved settled their own cases and of the total of 173, only 14 could not be adjusted.

For a trial month last summer, Mrs. Conlin's work was financed with Community Chest funds by the Council of Social Agencies. During December and January the money came from two women interested in housing conditions. It is expected that the $1,750 necessary to carry Mrs. Conlin to July 1 when it is hoped the District will take over, will be raised among other citizens.

Mrs. Hoffman said the commissioners will be visited by the landlord-tenant committee of the association and asked to include Mrs. Conlin in either their 1942 budget or their deficiency requests to Congress. Mrs. Conlin, Mrs. Hoffman said, is paid $175 a month salary—"you've got to pay at least that much to get a good social worker"—and an additional $115 a month is paid a clerical assistant. About $60 a month is needed for expenses.

Former Judge James Cobb is chairman of the committee. Other members are Bernard Wyckoff, president of the housing association, and Sefton Darr, Dr. Laurence Schmeckebier and Leifur Magnusson.

Rents disproportionately high for low incomes is the chief cause of the difficulty, Mrs. Hoffman said. Other causes are hasty action by real estate agencies, failure of tenants to understand their rights and the purposes of the landlord-tenant court, sickness and unwillingness of landlord to adjust rent-collection day to payday.

In a few cases, Mrs. Conlin reported, tenants try to take advantage of landlords by waiting for a summons before paying rent. Some, she related, view the court as a proper collection agency and a summons as a regular bill for rent due.

Mrs. Conlin's work and methods of keeping her on the job were considered Wednesday night at a meeting of prominent citizens at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, 4200 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Youth Group's Town Meeting Opens Today

The vanguard of delegations expected to bring more than 3,000 persons began to arrive in Washington last night for the opening today of the Town Meeting of Youth of the American Youth Congress.

Officers of the congress kept a staff on duty all night in the John Wesley Church, 1615 Fourteenth Street Northwest, to register delegates as they arrived by automobile, chartered bus and train from all sections of the Nation.

The problem of housing delegates was virtually solved last night when officers of the congress announced they had secured free accommodations for 600 persons and had arranged to shelter 2,400 in hotels and rooming houses at an average of 75 cents a night. An attempt was to have been made to locate 600 additional rooms in expectation that total attendance might be higher than 3,000.

The first act of the delegates today will be to move on to Capitol Hill to outline their opposition to the lend-lease bill and their views on other measures to members of the House and Senate.

The first session of the congress will be an open hearing on the lend-lease bill at 8 p. m. today at Turner's Arena, 1341 W Street Northwest. Members of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House and of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate have been invited to attend.

M. S. Battle, director of the division of motor vehicles.

Miss Bolling was shot in a room in the Bolling home. Rives, who has been restored to duty, testified at the trial justice hearing that he twirled his service revolver on his finger after remarking "it seems out of balance," and that it was discharged accidentally.
